The new 1955 Kelvinator Automatic Washer gives you two separate automatic washing cycles: "FINE FABRICS" so you can wash dresses like this beautiful nylon matte jersey, safely and confidently... and "REGULAR FABRICS" for washing heavy loads like denim work overalls, without watching or working. And it's impossible to make a mistake, Kelvinator's exclusive "Tel-a-Fabric" signal lights show you the washing cycle selected.

Now! A brilliant New Washer that's totally automatic...with Two complete washing cycles: 1. for heavy washes, 2. for fine fabrics and smaller loads.

The New 1955 Kelvinator

by JOAN ADAMS
Kelvinator Institute for Better Living

We of the Kelvinator Institute would like you to see a new and better way, a totally automatic way to get clothes sparkling white, sparkling bright. For the beautiful new 1955 Kelvinator brings you, not just one automatic cycle, like ordinary washers, but two completely separate automatic cycles.

It's like having two entirely separate Automatic Washers

Turn the dial to "regular fabrics" and you set the ideal washing cycle for your heavily-soiled laundry. Turn the dial to the "fine fabrics" setting and you have another completely automatic short washing cycle for your sheer dresses, nylons, orlons and frilly things... and for smaller mid-week loads. This new cycle saves you almost half the soap and water you use for the regular cycle.

We'd like you to see Kelvinator's exclusive Shampoo Washing. It begins with a half-tub of water and the full amount of soap or detergent, washing away most stubborn dirt and grime; see X-Centric Agitation, the new and different kind of agitator action, one continuous vibrating motion that's far gentler, completely safe for all your clothes. We'd like you to see Overflow Rinsing float dirt off over the top of clothes, not down through them; see gentle spin-drying remove 25% more water than the most efficient wringer.

See Kelvinator's beautiful new, matching 1955 Automatic Dryer

It frees you from the weather, from lifting, hauling, and hanging up clothes. It's the only one with all three safety features of safe temperature, safe cylinder, safety door. See this new 1955 laundry team at your Kelvinator Dealer's now.

Now—two separate automatic cycles on one dial give you totally automatic washing of all your clothes... new savings in time, soap and water. Kelvinator's exclusive "Tel-a-Fabric" signal lights show washing cycle selected. Back panel on both washer and dryer has full-length fluorescent light for easier sorting of clothes. The Whole Nation is Learning how to Fix ACID INDIGESTION Quickly!

Who'd guess
this happy father had Acid Indigestion
only minutes ago!

Last Year nearly TWO BILLION TUMS... Instant on-the-spot Relief
...sent Distressed People Happily on Their Way

The American tummy—is now relieved of the pain of heartburn and the discomfort of acid indigestion... by a little roll of TUMS that costs only 10¢.

For millions of Americans—statesmen, business men, professional men, housewives, laborers—the simple secret of carrying TUMS as faithfully as they carry their keys—has meant the end of discomfort from this common stomach trouble.

Now millions, who used to toss and turn with excess stomach acid, sleep like babies.

And countless people who used to run home to the medicine chest with acid indigestion, heartburn, now continue on their happy way.

Because TUMS is a remarkably tasty and harmless little tablet that you eat like candy.

At the first sign of sour stomach millions of sensible Americans just pop TUMS in their mouths. Instantly excess acid is neutralized without acid rebound. Heartburn, acid indigestion fade away. TUMS—only 10¢ a roll and you couldn't buy safer, quicker, more wonderful relief for a ten dollar bill.

People all over the Nation carry Tums as faithfully as they carry their Keys!

TUMS for the Tummy

A Special Message to Millions of Families who want, need and should have more Life Insurance

With Equitable's new "Living Insurance" you can build greater security for yourself and your family. New Low Cost . . . Unmatched Flexibility . . . High Cash Values!

"I just can't afford more life insurance." Have you ever said this to yourself even though you knew you should have more life insurance? Then this message is written for you.

Equitable has made it possible for you—and millions of other Americans—to buy more life insurance than you ever dreamed you could.

Equitable has designed a special low-cost policy—an economy-size package providing "living insurance." Your family is protected if you die. There are higher-than-ever cash benefits if you live. You don't have to die to win!

IMPORTANT SAVINGS are yours because you purchase in amounts of $10,000 or more. That's the big reason premiums are so low.

For example, at age 35, the premium you pay is 15% less than before—only $23.41 a year per $1000. Annual dividends may be used to reduce your premiums.

THAT'S NOT ALL! A big feature of this Special Equitable Policy is its flexibility. It's designed to fit the changing circumstances in your life.

For instance, if you take out the policy at age 35, you are guaranteed the right at age 55 to adjust your policy so that you will not have to pay any further premiums after 65. Or you may exercise the privilege of changing to a policy that will permit you to collect the full face amount at 65 or choose an income plan, whichever you wish. And you do so at a special low rate. Again—you save!

NO OTHER POLICY offers such flexibility at such low cost! Even if you are not a standard health or occupational risk, you may be able to obtain this protection at an appropriately low special rate.

Whole Life Insurance—available in amounts of $10,000 or more. 20 Year Illustration Assuming Dividends Are Applied to Reduce Premiums on $10,000 face amount.
AGE AT ISSUE	25	35	45	55

"When you have to kill a man it costs nothing to be polite"

It was the evening of December 7, 1941, in London. Churchill was relaxing at a table with his American friends, Ambassador Winant and Averell Harriman. When he turned on his wireless set for a regular news broadcast he heard something said about Japan attacking American territory. He at once put in a call to the White House.

"In two or three minutes Mr. Roosevelt came through. 'Mr. President, what's this about Japan?' 'It's quite true,' the President replied. 'They have attacked us at Pearl Harbor. We are all in the same boat now.'"

The very next day Churchill wrote the Japanese Ambassador to inform him their countries were at war. He recalls that some people criticized him for the "ceremonial" style he used in his letter. "But after all," comments Churchill, "when you have to kill a man it costs nothing to be polite."

This is one of the thousands of interesting sidelights and anecdotes of the war which the famous Prime Minister reveals in his six-volume masterpiece, The Second World War. Some are tragic, some dramatic—all of them reveal the human and intimate side of the war leaders in their conduct of affairs.

Stalin Thought It a Joke

Among the fascinating revelations in The Second World War is the by-play between Churchill, Stalin and President Roosevelt, as they sat around the conference or dining table, planning, arguing, toasting, joking.

Was Stalin really pulling Churchill's leg when he proposed that after the war 50,000 of Germany's military leaders and technicians be executed? Churchill tells how he objected to the idea, saying, "I would rather be taken out into the garden here and be shot myself than sully my own country's honor by such infamy."

President Roosevelt tried to make a joke of it by offering the compromise plan that only 49,000 be shot. When Elliott Roosevelt made a speech on the subject agreeing with Stalin, Churchill left the table in a huff. He was at once followed by Stalin and Molotov, grinning and eagerly declaring they were only playing, that nothing of a serious character had entered Stalin's head.

Mr. Churchill was awarded the Nobel Prize for Literature, principally for The Second World War, and there can be little doubt that it will come to be regarded as one of the great landmarks of world literature. For the rest of your life these six books will be a possession you will be proud to have acquired as a memento of your own part, however humble, in this great epoch of human history. The complete set is offered to you in a Trial Membership, as a dramatic demonstration of the Book-Dividend system of the Book-of-the-Month Club.

CONDITIONS OF THIS OFFER

★ YOU AGREE TO BUY AS FEW AS SIX BOOKS within your first year of membership from among the Club's Selections and Alternates. During the year at least 100 good books will be made available to you, from which you may choose. You receive a careful advance description of each selection and if you think it is a book you would not enjoy, you send back a form (always provided) specifying some other book you would like. Or you may say: "Send me nothing."

★ YOU WILL RECEIVE ALL SIX VOLUMES OF THE SECOND WORLD WAR AT ONCE. They will be sent with the first book you order from the Club. For a list of good books from which you can choose your first selection, please see coupon below.

★ AFTER BUYING SIX BOOKS—and as long as you remain a member—you will receive a Book-Dividend with every second book you buy—a beautiful or useful library volume. This member profit-sharing is similar to what happens in any consumer co-operative. A fixed percentage of what each member pays is set aside in a special fund. This is finally invested in enormous editions of other books, each of which is a Book-Dividend sent free to members. These six Churchill volumes may be considered "advanced" Book-Dividends earned by the purchase of the six books you agree to buy.

★ YOU MAY CANCEL YOUR MEMBERSHIP any time after buying six books. Membership in the Club is for no fixed period, continuing until notice of cancellation is received from the member.

In the early 1920s my husband and I motored to California by way of St. George. Though they were not then well-equipped to take care of "Gentiles," we stayed all night. The next morning we were astonished to see, shining above the cottonwoods and poplars, a magnificent temple (below).

When I thought of the toil it must take to keep that church looking as if it had just come fresh from the builders' hands, and to keep its park green in that arid land, I felt there was in that humble little Western town a spirit akin to that which in past centuries raised the great cathedrals.

H-bomb in the nick of time. You are deviating from the Communist line, even though you still say "Joe must go." I wish you would get on one side of the fence and stay there.

DON LINDLEY

Hico, Texas

When a nation brings to disrepute a man whose conscience makes him hesitate to create an H-bomb, and exalts a man without religious conviction who gives himself with abandon to the creation of such destructive forces, inner decay is well on its way.

JAEVLYN GRANT JOHNSON

Sirs

The story shows that Teller, also, is "confused and complicated." To condemn Oppenheimer's position on the bomb would have been fair, but to condemn his personality was rather indeed, coming from Teller.

Harrington Park, N.J.

Sirs

You show just pride that it was our country in which prewar European scientists sought freedom. Today a similar pride is unwarranted. As a physicist for two recent years in England, I found it painful to hear envy of America's research facilities qualified so often with a reluctant "Only I could stand the political climate."

ROBERT A. DUDLEY

Washington, D.C.

Sirs

In counting up those who were for the H-bomb in the fall of '49 you mentioned only Lewis Strauss and Senator McMahon. Didn't you slight Gordon Dean? I was under the impression that Gordon Dean was among the first to fight for the H-bomb.

JOHN HARRIS

New York, N.Y.

● Basing its report on recollections of AEC officials—records of the AEC discussions are classified—LIFE mentioned Lewis Strauss as the only supporter of an H-bomb crash program when the matter first came up. Mr. Dean, however, says that he too argued for the program in the original discussions. There is no doubt that Mr. Dean did work unceasingly and effectively during his three years as chairman of the AEC to bring the program to a successful conclusion.—ED.

CHRISTIAN LEADERS

Sirs

In "New Leaders in the Christian World" (LIFE, Sept. 6) you say the Greek Orthodox Church uses "wafers" in communion. The Greek Orthodox Church does not use wafers, but bread.

DR. PERRY VOULTSOS

New York, N.Y.

● The Greek Orthodox Church always uses bread. Almost all other churches use either.—ED

STRONG MAN'S SUICIDE

Sirs

The American public is already sufficiently confused over the name of Brazil's new president ("Strong Man's Suicide Sets Brazil on Fire," LIFE, Sept. 6) without translating "João" as "Joseph." The name is John.

JOHN SANDERS

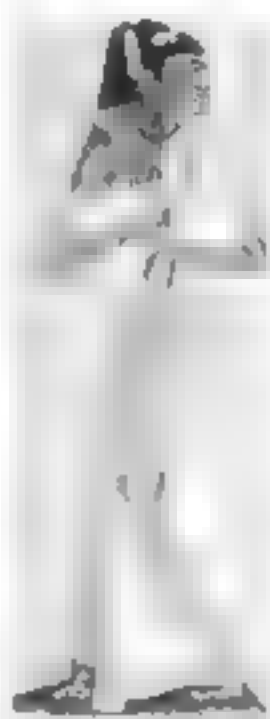

Gainesville, Fla.

● It is John.—ED.

'THE EGYPTIAN'

Sirs

You do the ancient Egyptian ladies (The Egyptian, LIFE, Sept. 6) an injustice by stating that they were in the habit of shaving their heads and going about their everyday tasks naked above the waist. I think you will find that the ancient wall-paintings show them with wigs on and dressed in diaphanous robes.

EDWIN JEFFRIES JR.

Youngstown, Ohio

● Both LIFE and Mr. Jeffries are right about the headdress. Upper-class Egyptian women shaved their heads, then put on wigs. But both were wrong about the exposed bosoms. Though Egyptian paintings of ten show women either naked or wearing diaphanous robes (taboret), in most cases this seems to have been artistic convention. In public women were fully clothed.—ED.

WORLD NEWSFRONTS

Sirs

In Life on the Newsfronts of the World (LIFE, Sept. 6) you imply that the two U.S. icebreakers were the first to make the Atlantic-to-Pacific trip via Northwest Passage. That is not quite correct. The R.M.P. supply ship St. Roch sailed from Halifax N.S. July 19, 1914 and reached Vancouver B.C. on Oct. 16, 1914.

W. DUNCAN

Sherbrooke, Que., Canada

● St. Roch made the passage twice, in 1912 and 1914, but avoided McClure Strait which geographers consider the western entrance to the Northwest Passage. U.S. icebreakers broke through McClure Strait for the first time.—ED

SPEAKING OF PICTURES . . .

. . . Photographer's best storm coverage shows sailor's balletlike battle with wind

Gordon Clauser is a 19-year-old Coast Guardsman stationed at the Mor-tauk Point Light Station at the easternmost tip of Long Island. Two weeks ago he and his station mates were right in the path of Hurricane Edna. At the height of the storm Seaman Clauser went out to check some equipment, then found himself engaged in an epic struggle to get back to shelter. Shouldering into the wind (top, left), he achieved (top right) one flat-footed step ahead, while a companion behind fought to keep standing. Taking another step (bottom, left), Clauser was nearly blown down. He plopped a foot in the mud for balance (bottom center), went cautiously forward on three points (third from left) and finally, the wind at his back, reached his goal on the other side (below). Photographer Grey Villet, covering the storm, found no damage to record at the well-prepared station; but he got these memorable pictures of the ballet-like battle between Clauser's 160 pounds and Edna's 100-mph gusts.

Time-Line—the simplest, easiest-to-use control ever designed . . . so flexible there's a way to wash everything. Lighted for easy reading, located for easy reaching. Operates automatically from fill to finish—or skips, shortens or repeats any washing action. Only Norge has the Time-Line control.

Only the NORGE Automatic Washer has the Time-Line control

To wash a full load of regular clothes, just push the Time-Line control button once and let Norge do the rest. From "fill" to "finish" everything's automatic. Thorough Norge Wave-Agitation and 5-Way Warm Rinsing get out all the dirt—even sand and greasy grime.

For a partial load, set the Time-Line for only as much hot (or warm) water as you need. From there on, the miracle Time-Line will run through exactly the same washing, warm rinsing and spin drying cycles as for a full load. And your clothes will come out just as sweet and clean.

The big easy-to-read Time-Line control makes it easy to launder delicate washables, too. With a quick push of the button, you can skip, shorten (or repeat) any action, any time. What's more, Norge's Wave-Agitation and float-away rinsing are actually gentler than hand washing!

And only NORGE dares to guarantee* better, easier washing...or your money back!

Today it's the most-wanted automatic washer in America. Norge plants are working overtime to keep up with the orders. And although many other washers have tried to imitate it, the amazing Time-Line control remains exclusive with Norge. Stop in at any Norge dealer's and let him demonstrate it for you.

Safety Spin model AW-450 (stops automatically if lid is raised during spin), $299.95. Other models from $199.95.

ALL FOR YOU...INSIDE EACH NEW NORGE AUTOMATIC WASHER!

You'll find a sample package of ALL...the new "controlled suds" detergent...inside your new Norge Automatic Washer. ALL has been tested and approved by the Norge Home Laundry Institute.

NORGE 30-DAY MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE

Use the Norge Time-Line Automatic Washer or matching 4-Way Drier in your own home for 30 days. If you're not completely satisfied, your Norge dealer will refund your money promptly.

DULLES GETS EXIT LINE; MARILYN AND A VENEZUELAN WITH A CAT NAMED NAPOLEON TAKE CARE OF THEIR OWN EXITS

EXIT LINES, LAUGHING AND OTHERWISE

What every playwright prays for is the inspiration for striking lines that will get his characters briskly off stage. Journalists pray for good tag lines too but since they cannot make them up they have to hope that the subjects of their stories will utter them. Last week the characters occupying the world's stage were responding nobly with dramatic, philosophical and just plain homey exit lines.

In England, when his busy feet (pp. 19-21) took him out to London airport, John Foster Dulles inadvertently received an ovation meant for Crooner Frankie Laine (above). "What a disappointment," sighed the Secretary. "I thought they were here to greet me." Modest Mrs. Joe DiMaggio (pp. 71-74) wound up the commotion she caused in Manhattan with a memorable exit line, "I'm just a pretty girl who is soon forgotten. But not Joe. He's an all-time great." Another Marilyn, after an even bigger and more successful commotion in Toronto (pp. 63-66), made the understatement of the week, "I'm sort of breathless." In Little Rock, Ark. a strange, sad curtain speech was recited by a man just cut down by five bullets from a policeman's gun (pp. 28-29). "Thank you, fellows," he said, "it's just what I wanted."

But some of the nicest exit lines were done in pictures. One (p. 134) was the happy finale in the remarkable photographic account of a musk ox roundup. The other came during the production of the color essay on diplomatic Washington (pp. 102-109). Hank Walker was at the Venezuelan embassy photographing Ambassador Dr. César González and family at dinner when son Ruben González, 6, demanded, "I want Napoleon in the picture!" and left the table. A little baffled, Walker waited. Ruben came back with Napoleon and stood in an expectant pose. Walker obliged and left Ruben (above, right) with the last word, pictorially at least.

His thinner skin really needs this softer tissue

Softer than ever—2 rolls of ScotTissue equal more than 3 rolls of most other tissues

His sweet helplessness fills your heart with love. You try in every way to shelter him from the slightest hurt. One easy way you can protect his tender baby skin is in your choice of a truly safe, soft bathroom tissue—it means so much to your little baby's daily comfort.

At bath time, you wash his little body with his own special downy-soft cloth. At changing time, be sure to use a tissue that is equally suited to his "tender-skin" needs. The new ScotTissue is especially kind to your baby's skin. Yet it has strength and absorbency to help you to cleanse quickly and thoroughly.

1,000 sheets—over ½ more than the 650 sheets you get from most other tissues

The new ScotTissue is your wisest buy for the whole family. The big 1,000-sheet roll goes further, lasts longer—another great Scott value.

FEET OF DULLES AND EDEN MARCH THROUGH LONDON AIRPORT (TOP, LEFT), DOWNING STREET, DOWN AN ALLEY, INTO FOREIGN OFFICE (BOTTOM, RIGHT)

THE TIMES THAT TRY MEN'S SOLES FOR DIPLOMATS AND THEIR BUSY FEET

It was a week for diplomatic goings and comings, for a clapping of well-shod feet through the airports and embassies of European capitals. There was an urgent reason: the problem of how to include a rearmed Germany in the common defense of free Europe now that the French had scuttled EDC (LIFE, Sept. 13).

The week's first traveler to set off after answers to the question was Britain's Foreign Secretary, Anthony Eden. In six fast-paced days (next page) he visited Brussels, Bonn, Rome and Paris trying to find conditions under which German rearming would be acceptable to the other nations, including France.

Even as Mr. Eden hurried from Rome to Paris, another veteran traveler was winging toward Bonn and long talks with Chancellor Konrad Adenauer. He was Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, who has clocked 152,000 miles since he took office 20 months ago.

From Bonn, Dulles sped to England, pointedly skipping Paris. Near the end of the week, the two pairs of diplomatic feet walked together (above). For almost six hours Eden and Dulles compared notes on their travels. Then, after a call on another well-traveled diplomat (p. 21), Dulles returned home.

As a result of all this diplomatic leg work, the U.S. and Britain learned that they were agreed on the need for rearming Germany and giving her full sovereignty. This could be done either by including her in NATO or the five-power Brussels treaty of 1948. Mendès-France, still walking a tightrope, had troublesome reservations. Things, it was hoped, might clear up at a nine-power meeting to be held in London.

EDEN IN BONN, ROME, PARIS AND BACK TO LONDON

A FIRM STAND by Chancellor Adenauer (right) greets Eden at Bonn as the two statesmen exchange views on European unity.

WITH MILITARY ESCORT at Rome Airport, Eden (right) leads Foreign Minister Attilio Piccioni

(left), who later resigned to defend his son in a scandal. Eden won support here for new security treaty.

IN PARIS, Eden (left) walks briskly toward Premier Mendès-France, who sets off with his guest in cross-footed gait (center). Later Eden climbs resolutely to Quai d'Orsay (right) for talks with host.

TENTATIVE MENDES, keen to please Eden yet not commit himself, shifts leg during NATO visit.

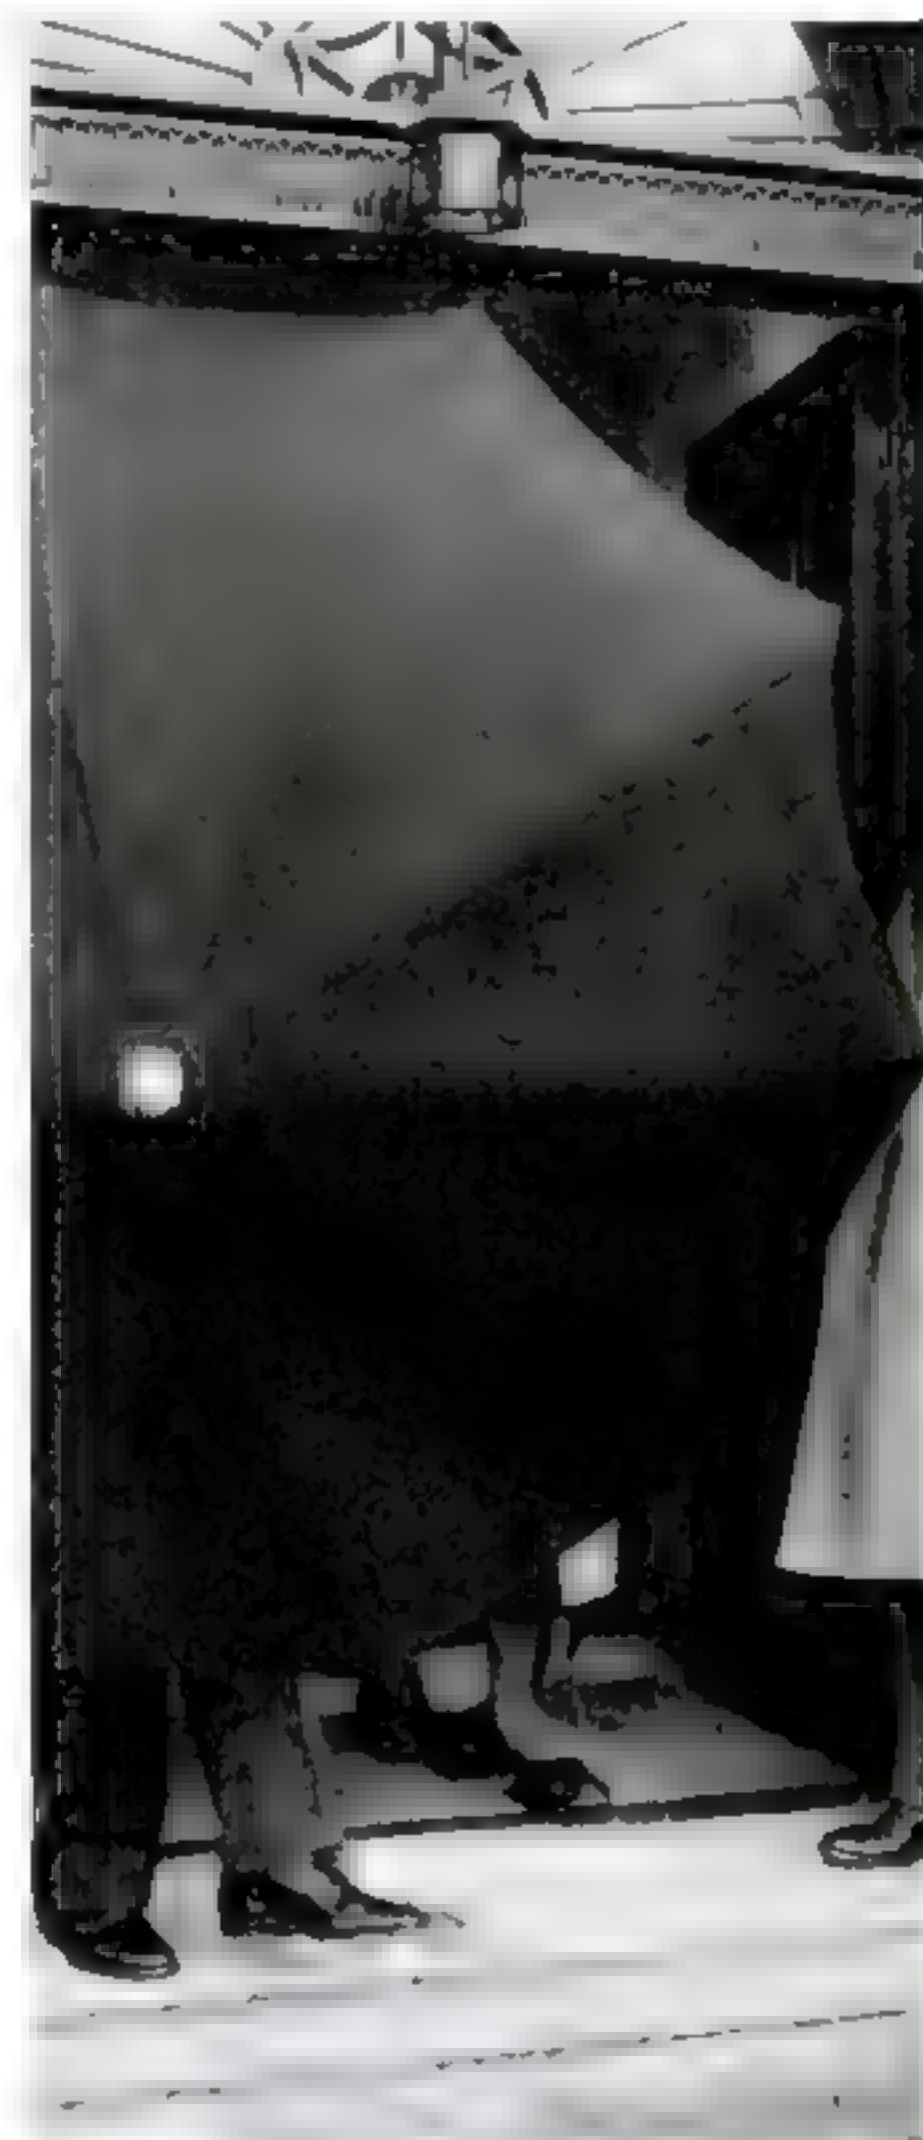

A WAITING EDEN, back in London after a busy week abroad, stands at the airport to greet Dulles.

DULLES IN BONN AND LONDON

IN BRISK STEP Secretary Dulles and Chancellor Adenauer (right) leave Bonn airport for their talks.

CLIMAX OF VISIT came at a luncheon given by Prime Minister Churchill at 10 Downing Street for Dulles and Eden, who took their leave and went on to an all-afternoon conference. In sharp contrast to recent coolness in U.S. and British relations, last week's meetings were marked by cordiality, understanding and agreement on the essential point—in this case, Germany's role in Western defense.

ARE COMMUNISTS PEOPLE?

CINERAMA IN DAMASCUS

All too often the Soviet Union's psychological warfarers seem to run rings around their American counterparts, partly because they have more money but also because they frequently seem more clever. Sample: at the Izmir trade fair in Turkey (pp. 30, 31) the Soviets had one of the biggest pavilions of the show, crowded it with civilian goods to show the Turks how good, and peaceful minded, is Soviet life. The U.S., which had no exhibit, chose this occasion to send part of its Sixth Fleet into Izmir harbor.

That was a prize example of a wrong way to run the cold war. Happily, there is now, from Syria, a fine example of the right way. Harris Peel, the U.S. Information Agency officer in Damascus, learned that the Soviets were spending $500,000 to build the biggest pavilion at the Damascus trade fair. Peel had no money to spend. But he used his noodle. He knew that Cinerama had never been shown outside the U.S. He got in touch with its owners, the Stanley Warner Corp., in the U.S. They agreed to send it out free. An Air Force transport flew out 35 tons of equipment which was set up in an improvised open-air theater. Results?

"Officers of the U.S. Information Agency in Damascus were reported besieged by mass demands for tickets," reported the State Department. "Crowds were so great that one-inch guard rails around the entrances bent like solder wire. A 30-man guard of police was inadequate to handle the crowds. Up to 2,000 persons at each showing stand outside the walls and hang from eucalyptus trees. The gigantic response has so far outstripped interest in [the] large Soviet exhibit that local Communist organs are accusing the U.S. of 'unfair competition.'"

Free tickets were being "scalped." On all the roads to Damascus crowds flocked in. Personages from all over the Arab world came to see Cinerama. At week's end police arrested a Syrian photoengraver who was printing counterfeit Cinerama tickets and selling them for as high as $1.50. Like imitation, counterfeiting is the sincerest form of flattery. We hope that Peel bails out the counterfeiter and the USIA gives Peel a boost in pay and a promotion. Where's the next fair?

Things are getting a lot tougher for U.S. Communists. The Department of Justice is starting its fall drive against them armed with eight new laws passed by the last Congress. The best-known and seemingly the most comprehensive of these laws is one called "an act to outlaw the Communist party." If we have really done that, why does this not dispose of the matter? Why isn't every Communist already in jail?

The reason of course is that the U.S. Constitution prevents us from being as anti-Communist as congressmen like to sound. The outlawry legislation, so far as the lawyers can decipher it, gives the Attorney General little or no more power than he had before.

It is now evident that this queer law has accomplished one purpose—its main one. That was to make its author, Senator Humphrey of Minnesota, and his fellow A.D.A. Democrats seem more anti-Communist than the Republicans, thus canceling whatever political force remained in McCarthy's charge of "twenty years of treason." But as a weapon against Communism the law is somewhere between a mystery and a fraud.

After declaring that the Communist party is not a party but a conspiracy, the Humphrey Act strips it of its "rights, privileges and immunities." But the C.P. is like other parties in one respect at least: it has little tangible existence apart from its members. It is identifiable chiefly as the aroma, record and behavior of some 25,000 individuals. Many if not most of these individuals are U.S. citizens. A man with this birthright cannot possibly be "outlawed" except by due process of law, including free access to the courts.

Does the Humphrey Act curtail this birthright and entrench on the Bill of Rights? Perhaps, but not in any radically new way. U.S. law parted company with the pristine purity of the First Amendment (free speech and assembly) back in 1940 when Congress passed the Smith Act, which makes it a crime to advocate the violent overthrow of the government. Since 1948 this act has sentenced 81 leading Communists to jail and 30 more are awaiting trial. Its constitutionality has been upheld, and in doing so the Supreme Court even changed the old Holmes doctrine of "clear and present danger." The active advocacy of the full-scale Communist program, since it leads to "probable" violence, is now illegal at any time. But party membership is not in itself conclusive evidence of such advocacy, for Communists are tried as individuals, and no two individual Communists are any more identical than other members of the human race. One intensive study of ex-Communists (The Appeals of Communism by Gabriel Almond) finds that most members joined as dupes, were never conscious conspirators and were likely to quit when they learned the party's true aims.

The protracted litigation which has attended the Smith Act, and which has so far postponed the registration of the party as required by the Internal Security Act of 1950, will be increased, not diminished, by the Humphrey Act. Senators most experienced with this type of legislation, notably McCarran and Jenner, were accordingly contemptuous of the Humphrey bill. Said Jenner, "It's a waste of time." But to vote for it was of course a political necessity.

The virtue to be made of this necessity, if any, lies in its killing all ambiguity about what Americans think of the C.P. That is why apostles of simplicity and directness, like Senator Margaret Chase Smith and the American Legion, have been advocating "outlawry" for years. The previous approach, crabwise, piecemeal and legalistic, left certain doubts about the official attitude toward Communism which could be exploited by Senator McCarthy. It also created a Byzantine atmosphere in which the C.P. seemed more of a menace than it is, and in which J. Edgar Hoover could levitate from a good tough cop to a political untouchable. The Humphrey Act, by stating so flatly our public hostility toward Communists, may clear this atmosphere a little and enable us to see the domestic threat in better perspective alongside the real threat, which lies abroad. But let no one suppose it represents a radical change in the laws of our land.

Those laws still give American Communists rights which they would not give us if they were in power. Is that bad? Anyone who thinks so might consider the related problem of the ex-Communists, who outnumber the present party membership by 20 or 30 to 1.

Until one of the Attorney General's new laws was passed, the ex- (or would-be ex-) Communist called to testify was in a four-way box. If he told all, he might be liable to prosecution for his own past offenses. If he lied, he was liable for perjury. If he pled the Fifth Amendment he convicted himself with public opinion. If he told what he wanted to tell, he might be in contempt of court or Congress. To give him a sanctuary from these hopeless choices, Congress passed an immunity act. Far more useful than the Humphrey gesture, this act makes it possible (also obligatory) for a would-be defector to tell the truth without risking jail. It makes it easier for him to square his plight with his conscience.

And the conscience of the individual Communist is the party's most vulnerable point. If the immunity law helps stir this conscience, more power to it. But more power also to the courts and Constitution, which prevent impassioned legislators from reading Communists out of the human race. We shall make far more progress in the struggle by winning them back than by throwing them in jail.

QUEMOY ALERT

On Quemoy Island, Chinese Nationalist troops crouched in foxholes overlooking the shore, rifles and machine guns in hand, alerted by the shells the Chinese Reds had been throwing at them for days. The shovel tossed hasty aside is almost a symbol of their soldiering—endless work and vigilance (see following pages) against the time when Red assault may come in earnest.

ISLAND UNDER RED SIEGE

Shelling smashes a harbor but fails to smoke out U.S. intentions

Quemoy is a dumbbell-shaped island 10 miles long stuck right in the mouth of Amoy Bay 135 miles west of Taiwan. From its hillside fox-holes three Chinese divisions (42,000 men) can clearly see the Chinese mainland where four Communist armies (250,000) are encamped. Ever since a Red attempt to take the island failed miserably in 1949, the Communists have been silent about Quemoy. But now, suddenly, their guns are speaking once again.

First, Red frogmen, called "water ghosts" in Chinese, raided the island and captured a sentry. Then Communist field guns opened up from the mainland, smashed Quemoy's main port and killed two U.S. officers training Chiang's forces. From Taiwan, Nationalist planes, including new jets, swarmed up to paste the Red position about Amoy. From Manila, U.S. Seventh Fleet ships steamed to sea. On Quemoy, LIFE's Howard Sochurek took these pictures of the island under fire.

Quemoy Island could be taken by the Communist troops—but only at a tremendous cost. It might be held by the Nationalist forces especially if they had the help of the Seventh Fleet and U.S. air support. But as of last week nobody knew if the Communist commanders really intended to invade Quemoy—nor had the U.S. fallen for the obvious Red invitation to tell them what we would do if they did.

RED SPY JUNKS, captured by the Nationalists, are beached at Golden Sands Bay on island's north shore. Boats are regularly used by Communist frogmen to snoop along the shore seeking information.

MAINE MUSKIE GETS BUILD-UP

Democrats hail surprise winner

With sudden exultation Democrats were reviving a shopworn political adage, "As Maine goes, so goes the nation," which they themselves have done their best to discredit. In Maine last week a tall (6 foot 4) young (40) Democratic lawyer named Edmund S. Muskie surprised the whole country, including himself and all other Democrats, by winning the governorship from the Republican Burton M. Cross. Not since 1934 had staunchly conservative Maine elected a Democratic governor. The Democrats put only $16,000 in the campaign.

Muskie immediately found himself in the national limelight, in demand for TV and a prize exhibit at a big rally given by the party's top brass (opposite, below). But even Muskie discounted the national importance of his election. Governor Cross had not recovered from the effects of a liquor scandal of 1952, had made some unpopular appointments and had antagonized Maine's potato growers by speaking against high price supports. The election, however, had the national G.O.P. worried. Vice President Nixon, who had made the mistake of telling Maine residents before the election that their voting had special significance, departed on a busy political tour through the Midwest to warn his party even more gravely of the need for tough campaigning. The Democrats, trying to make the most of their unexpected victory, began stepping up their plans in the expectation that Muskie's victory would ease their problem of raising campaign money.

DEATH IN TELEPHOTO

Tragedy is played out at Little Rock front door

One noontime last week in Little Rock a carpenter named James Long escaped from the Arkansas State Hospital for mental diseases and went searching for a car. He found none but picked up a .22 rifle. When police located him, he was in the home of A. D. Lynn, and Mrs. Lynn was his captive. "I'm not going back to that lie house," Long shouted. "Let Mrs. Lynn come out," yelled an officer. Long agreed but said he was coming too.

There were 11 policemen around the house. There were also two photographers, Louis Oberste and Chris Button of Station KARK-TV with their telephoto cameras. Then, with frightening intimacy, the cameramen and, through them, millions of people were right up at the Lynns' front steps—the last violent moments of a man's life were played out.

Well-stocked Russians star at a Turkish bazaar

The Russians, striving to present a fetching face to the outside world, were showing off their newest tricks at an international trade fair in Izmir, Turkey. In a huge prefabricated pavilion they displayed a mass of goods and machinery which gave a glowing picture of domestic prosperity. Instead of posters of Soviet leaders flowing from the walls there were beautiful murals of agricultural parades. Instead of stern-faced Soviet officials there were friendly attendants. Visitors glanced through other nations' pavilions where officials shouted "Dokana!" ("Don't touch!") when anyone got too close to exhibits. But they happily piled into the Russian pavilion where they could handle and even taste everything with Russian cameramen eagerly ground out footage for future propaganda (above). Some of Russia's satellites also set up exhibits but the U.S., with little budgetary provision for fairs, had none (see Editorial). Its only counter to this exhibit of "peace-loving" manufacturers was a badly timed visit of the U.S. Sixth Fleet. None of the displayed Russian goods were for sale. But the Russians had certainly succeeded in selling a better impression of the U.S.S.R. to the traditionally anti-Russian Turks.

HIS NOSE SPLIT OPEN, ROCKY MARCIANO CHARGES, TRYING TO FINISH OFF EZZARD CHARLES IN SEVENTH ROUND

TWICE IS ONCE TOO OFTEN

Ezzard Charles goes way of foes who fight Rocky a second time

Heavyweight Champion Rocky Marciano feels that if he keeps throwing punches some will land—even after the bell (above, right)—and hurt. It has a peculiar effect upon foes who have slugged it out with him and come back to try again. The second time Jersey Joe Walcott tried he seemed too willing to be knocked out. Last week Ezzard Charles fought Rocky for the second time and tried hard. But as he was counted out in the eighth, an expression of immense relief crossed his face.

He got up and flashed a big smile (left) as he walked across the ring to congratulate his conqueror. But Charles had gotten in a few telling licks. He gouged cuts on Marciano's nose and over his eye, making it evident that Rocky is not only one of the ring's busiest punchers but also one of the easiest to cut.

AN OMINOUS WHITE CLOUD RISES FROM A WELL-TO-DO RESIDENTIAL SECTION BELOW THE PEAK OF CORCOVADO

SORROW AT THE 'HAPPY SIGHT'

Standing on the high hill of Corcovado, with its famous statue of Christ in concrete, LIFE Photographer Leonard McCombe was getting a good look at the city of Rio de Janeiro. Suddenly a thunderous rumble rolled up from below, followed by a swirling cloud of dust. McCombe photographed the scene (above), then rushed down into the city. There he found an apartment house, named the Vista Alegre

(The Happy Sight), had suddenly collapsed. McCombe learned that residents had detected ominous sounds in a supporting pillar that morning. Building inspectors condemned the structure and ordered the tenants out. But as they were removing their belongings the building crumbled and carried the tenants with it. Toll at week's end: seven dead, 30 seriously injured, a dozen missing and presumed dead.

New Westinghouse "Eye-Saver" Bulb reduces reflected glare that causes eyestrain, headaches, fatigue

Now you can get a bulb that filters out glare from the light you and your family read by. This new Westinghouse light bulb reduces glare from shiny book pages when your children read. It makes close work like sewing easier, too.

Because of the way these special bulbs cut glare, Westinghouse engineers nicknamed them "Eye-Savers." The inside of the Eye-Saver bulb is powdered with millions of special, glare-filtering particles. Harsh concentrated light is gone. Only light that's easy on the eyes remains. Eye-Savers give you the same amount of helpful light you now get from ordinary bulbs.

Put Eye-Savers in your living room to make reading and seeing easier for your children . . . in your kitchen and bath to reduce glare from highly polished surfaces . . . in your bedroom and nursery to soften shadows and make rooms more pleasant.

Eye-Savers make many home seeing tasks more comfortable and less fatiguing. They're wonderful in the home workshop to cut down tiring reflected glare from bright tools. Get these new light bulbs for easier, more comfortable seeing in every room of your home.

Make sure you get Eye-Saver bulbs. They're made only by Westinghouse. Put them on your shopping list today.

Desegregation gets underway, a stenographer wins weight in gold, 250,000 flee Red Vietnam

The first major direct result of last May's Supreme Court ruling that segregated public schools are unconstitutional came with the opening of the new school year in Washington, D.C. For the first time schools in the nation's capital—which President Eisenhower had asked to lead the way in desegregation—held mixed classes. Under a plan which will leave the city schools without any racial restrictions at all by the end of this year, new pupils were enrolled without regard to race; 3,000 Negro pupils were transferred from crowded Negro schools to schools formerly all white; and pupils who had recently changed residence were allowed to enter the nearest school without regard to race. The integration went off totally without incident.

Elsewhere in the nation desegregation took a slower course. Though school color lines were beginning to fade in the border states, the deep South generally was studying measures to circumvent whatever enforcement procedures the Supreme Court decrees after it hears argument this fall on how desegregation should be put into effect. But in only one place where desegregation was actually tried did it run into serious trouble: in West Virginia, at the Greenbrier County schools and the White Sulphur Springs high school five days of integration ended after protests inspired, apparently, not by the children but by their parents.

President Soekarno, 53, of Indonesia took himself an extra wife, a beautiful 32-year-old divorcee with five children. In Indonesia this is neither criminal nor immoral since the Moslem religion, practiced by the president and most Indonesians, allows a man four wives if he can support them. But angered Indonesian women's organizations tried to upset the marriage on grounds Soekarno did not fulfill another Moslem requirement for taking another wife: permission of his present wife. She was so irate she has threatened to get a divorce.

A scandal engrosses Italy

In Italy the scandal of an obscure Roman girl's unsolved death flared up again. Wilma Montesi's body, found on a beach near Rome, produced a major scandal (LIFE, March 22) involving dope, graft and big names. Police seized passports of a former Rome police chief, a grandson of ex-King Victor Emmanuel, and Piero Piccioni, son of the foreign minister. With the Communists having a propaganda field day, Foreign Minister Attilio Piccioni submitted his resignation. Last week Premier Mario Scelba accepted it.

MARY MCCREA IS WEIGHED IN THE BALANCE OF U.S. MINT

A 32-year-old San Francisco unemployed stenographer stepped on one side of the scales at the U.S. mint while gold was piled on the other. The gold balanced at 148 $\frac{3}{4}$ pounds, and Mary Jane McCrea was given a check for its value, \$75,158.84. Miss McCrea, whose hobby is entering contests but who never won more than \$50 before, had just won a "Your Weight in Gold" contest sponsored by Lever Brothers soap manufacturers. She wrote the best 25-word sentence beginning "I prefer..." The winning line remained top secret to protect the company against all those who would think they had written a better one.

Surprising exodus from Communism

More than 250,000 refugees have moved from Red-controlled North Vietnam to South Vietnam since the cease-fire of July 22, vastly exceeding all estimates of the number who wanted freedom badly enough to leave their homes for it. The U.S. Foreign Operations Administration, which is participating in the resettlement, said that 110,000 have been moved by the U.S. Navy. The refugees are housed first in tent cities, then assigned to newly built 2,000-person villages and given land, clothes, agricultural tools and money to buy farm animals.

Three into freedom

After 18 long months three Americans walked out of Red China into Hong Kong and heard friends say, "My God, are we glad to see you." The three, 42-year-old NBC Correspondent Richard Applegate, 31-year-old Merchant Marine Officer Benjamin Krasner and 27-year-old INS Correspondent Donald M. Dixon, had been captured by a Communist gunboat while sailing a yawl named the Kert off Hong Kong. Under brainwashing they "confessed" to anti-Red acts because it meant release. Applegate and Dixon will return to reporting and Krasner will wait for the release of his Chinese girl friend who was aboard the yawl.

GOODYEAR

presents a new kind of Tubeless Tire

Standard equipment for leading '55 cars...costs you no more than a standard tire and tube !

Goodyear has produced a new tire—a tubeless tire—the proud successor to every tire you've ever known or heard about.

After years of research that sought a new approach to the tubeless idea, this tire is now a reality—thanks to the development by Goodyear of a new way of treating tire cord—the exclusive and patented 3-T process.

The 3-T process makes the new Goodyear Tubeless Super-Cushion the most efficient air container ever made. It permits a new method of constructing tire bodies. It lets the new Tubeless Super-Cushion set new standards of tire performance.

The new Tubeless Super-Cushion gives:

1. Puncture Protection—of a kind never offered before in either standard or tubeless tires.

2. Blowout Protection—providing a greatly increased margin of safety.

3. Better Performance—a quieter, smoother, easier ride—plus even greater mileage than today's great standard tires.

4. And it combines all these advantages at a reasonable price—no higher than the price of a standard tire and tube.

Perhaps the best proof of these statements is found in the action of the automobile industry. The new Tubeless Super-Cushion will be standard equipment on many of the new 1955 cars.

On the next two pages you'll see how 3-T Cord permits the All-New Tubeless Super-Cushion to outperform any comparable tire made today—tubeless or regular.

"Leapfrog" at 60 m.p.h.! When this Death Dodger takes off, he hurtles that 3500-lb. automobile a full 8 feet in the air! When it comes down . . . he knows he's landed! The tires take a terrific beating!

We gave the famous Jimmie Lynch Death Dodgers three sets of the new Tubeless Super-Cushions. Told them to give them the works. Challenged them to blow them out and rip them off their rims!

That wrecking crew put those tires through the toughest punishment a tire has ever taken. Rocked them at 65 m.p.h. in a series of hair-raising turns. Dropped them down with a thudding, two-wheel angle drop to try to blow them out with rim pinches. Leaped 8 feet in the air and came down with the force of a pile driver on a cement roadway!

MORE PEOPLE RIDE ON GOODYEAR TIRES THAN ON ANY OTHER KIND

ALL-NEW TUBELESS SUPER-CUSHION

We challenged the world's toughest stunt drivers to try to damage the

ALL-NEW TUBELESS SUPER-CUSHION!

Goodyear's new kind of tubeless tire takes smashing impacts without damage—because it's the only tubeless tire made with 3-T Cord!

What happened? Nothing! Not a single Tubeless Super-Cushion blew out or left the rim. Not a single pound of air was lost! "The most amazing example of tire strength we've ever seen!" said the Death Dodgers. Now you can have this new kind of tubeless tire for your car, and it costs you no more than a standard tire and tube.

New flatter tread and lighter, cooler-running 3-T Cord construction give longer lasting, more economical wear! The strength and resiliency of 3-T Cord give you a softer, smoother, easier ride—cushion your car against road shock.

And Goodyear's new anti-vibration tread design with 1806 inches of nonskid edges and 880 deep-cut stop-notches stands guard between you and a dangerous skid. You get 15% more traction for safer stops.

See the All-New Tubeless Super-Cushion at your Goodyear dealer's today. Remember, it's endorsed by America's leading car makers. Why not bring your car up-to-date with new Tubeless Super-Cushions? Your Goodyear dealer will buy all the unused mileage in your present tires.

This new tire is available in either 3-T Rayon or Nylon Cord—as a tubeless tire or in a tire and tube combination. Goodyear, Akron 10, Ohio.

LANDOWNERS, MANY OF WHOM CAME STRAIGHT FROM CHURCH, ARRIVE EARLY AT WELL TO WATCH THE TEST

WAITING TO GET RICH QUICK

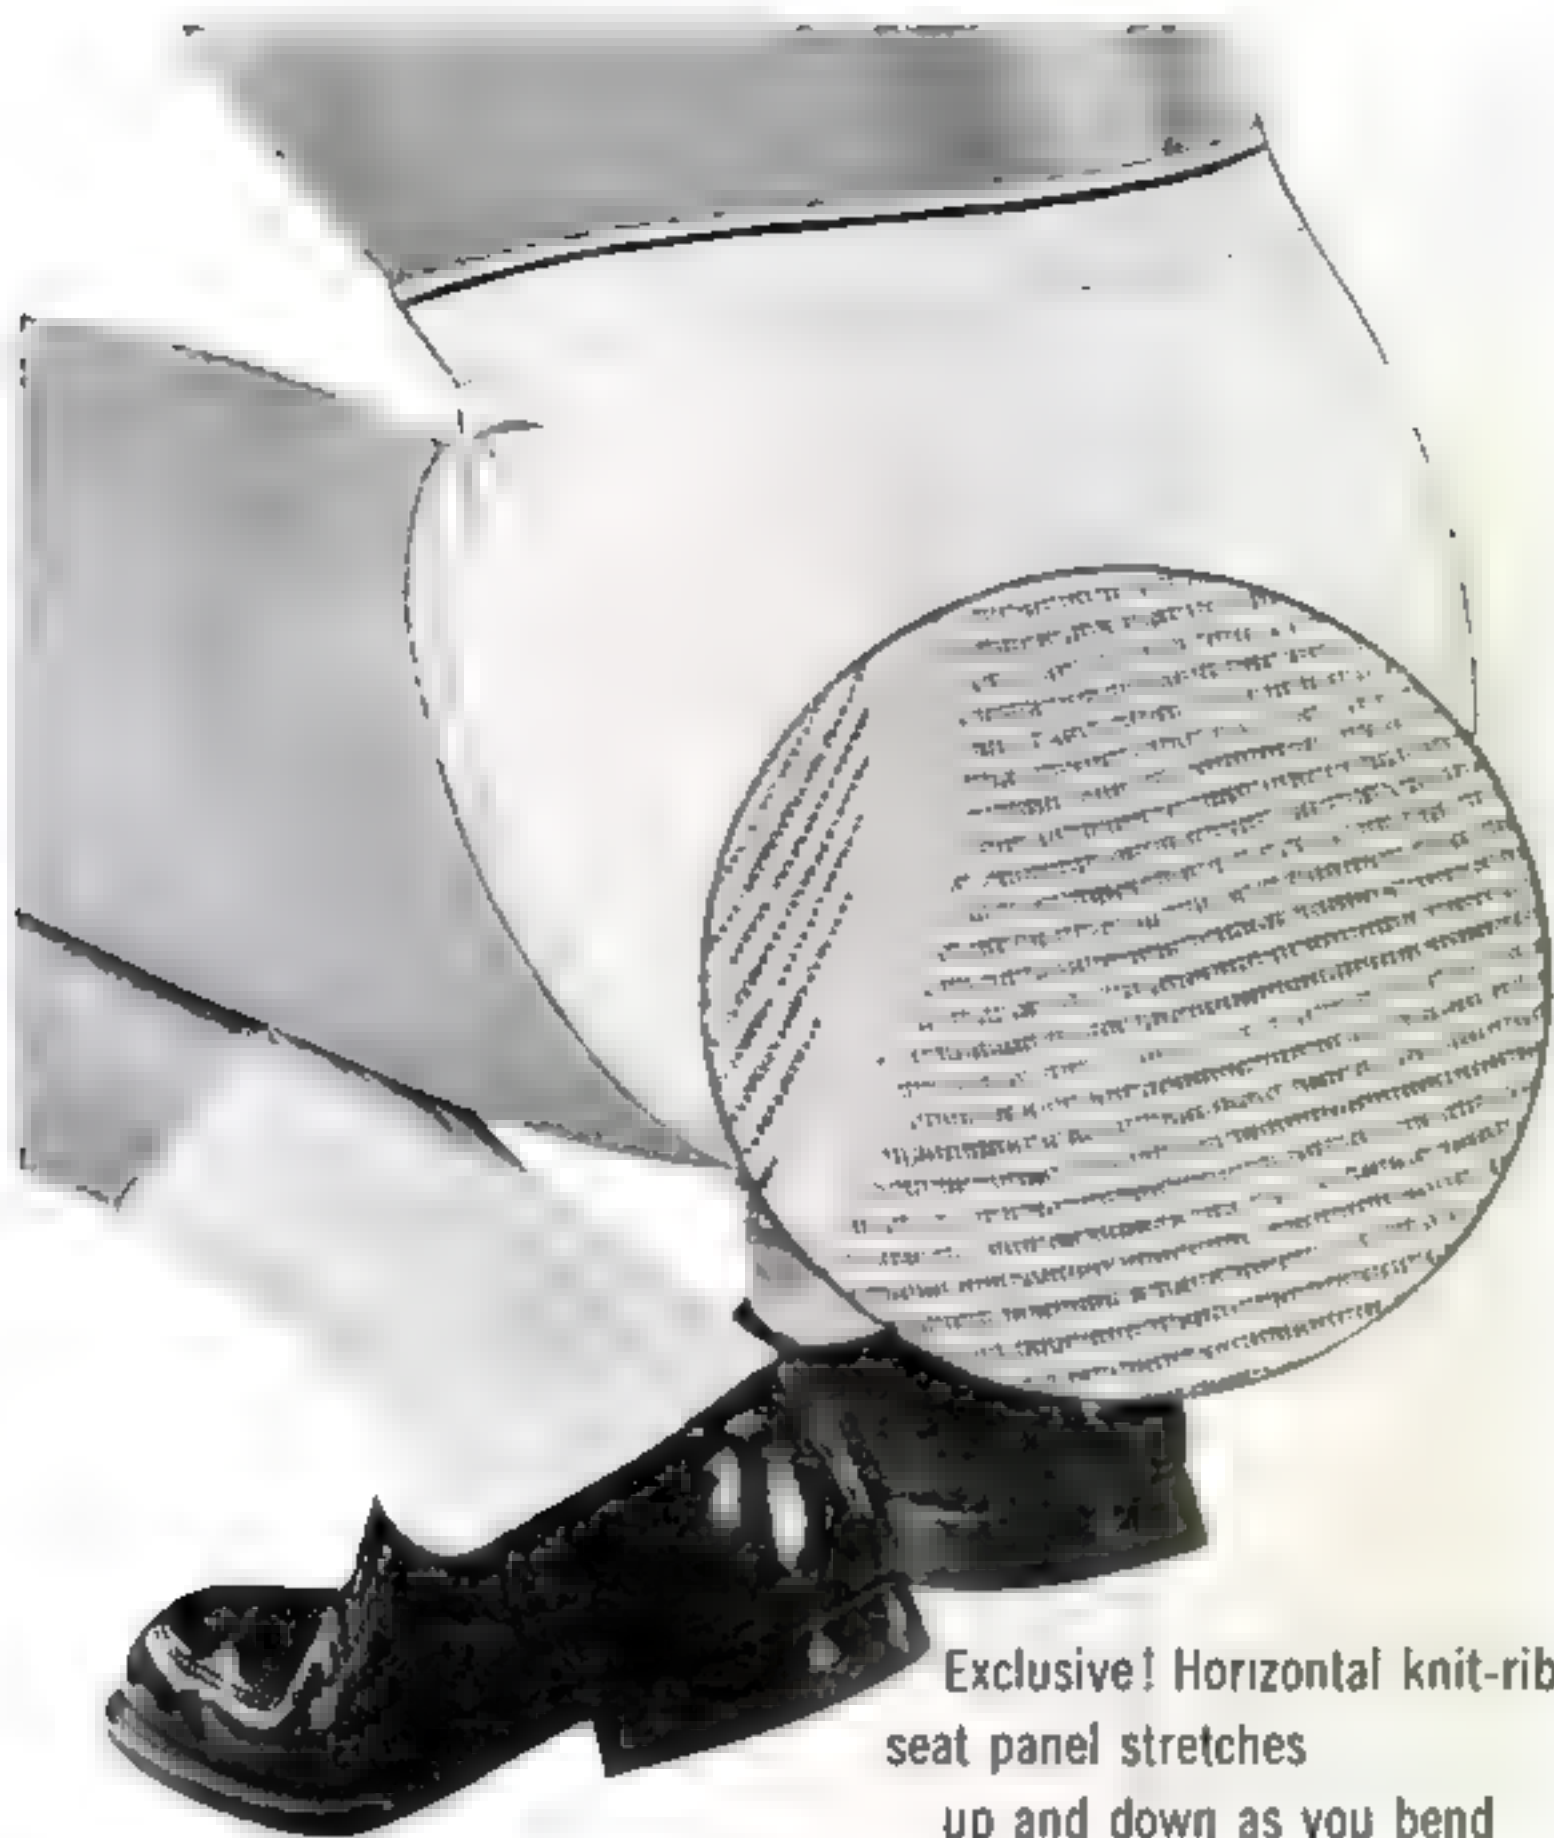

Texas farmers spend anxious afternoon at test oil well which will bring them wealth—or salt water

The men, women and children gathered around the slimy pit wondered if they would feel rich or feel foolish by the time dusk fell across the Texas Panhandle. A swabbing test was being run on a 9,569-foot $250,000 well near Pampa. Depending on whether salt water or oil gushed from the test pipe, they would go back to hard work on their drought-ridden farms—or start pricing Cadillacs. The oil men in the Sunday crowd were equally excited. For years they had been convinced there were more oil deposits in the Anadarko Basin, which had produced so prodigiously in Oklahoma. Since World War II oil firms had spent $50 million drilling 17 test wells. Now Phillips Petroleum Company was testing its No. 1 Delp well.

At 2 p.m. the swabbing started—a process of pushing a plunger down the well and lifting the contents up. The pipes gushed a sickly fluid. A man tasted it. "Salty as the sea," he said disgustfully. Again and again the Delp was swabbed. It gave forth only salt water. At 7 1/2 many of the people turned sadly to go home. Suddenly came a long rumble. Then, out of the test pipe spurted a yellow river glistening like gold. "There comes the oil!" shouted the crowd. People splashed their new wealth over themselves. They scooped it up in milk bottles to taste it. Then they went home and began selling leases on their land at up to $1,000 an acre and calculating the one-eighth royalties they would get on whatever oil comes in.

TASTING, landowners seek to determine if the flow from test pipe is salt water or oil. At this testing it turned out to be salt water with trace of oil.

STILL SALT WATER, a sample disappoints landowner Albert Cook, 75, as he takes another of his frequent tastes from well's test pipe.

OIL AT LAST is collected in tube by Foreman Bill Calvert. The crude tested at 43.6 gravity, quality grade, with a tiny .06 of 1% salt water.

may be the beginning of baldness.

The danger may be present long before you notice any thinning of hair.

Here is a simple new method for daily care of your hair. Hygienically effective—kills dandruff germs*—it is helping thousands

With dandruff, you're wise to switch to a daily hair-care program that actually kills dandruff germs*.

Many men care for their hair with preparations that do nothing for dandruff, except to stick the flakes to their scalps.

Let us make it clear that we don't claim miracles. We can't prevent baldness. But you should know the following facts about dandruff, and the value of hygienic care for your head.

Those unsightly "snowflakes" on the shoulders of your suit—excessive dandruff—reveal a strong possibility that you will be at least partially bald in years to come.

Dermatologists differ in their views as to the causes of baldness. But dermatologists do agree that the condition which is symptomized by excessive dandruff does frequently lead to baldness.

1ST STAGE

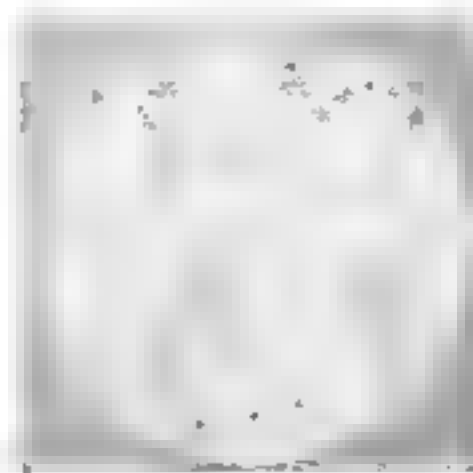

Spores of Malassez in a case of ordinary dandruff.

Seborrhea

What causes excessive dandruff? It commonly arises from a disease of the scalp called seborrhea. *Many leading dermatologists say that a causative agent of seborrheic dandruff is a tiny parasite called the Spore of Malassez—also known as Pityrosporum Ovale and the Bottle Bacillus. In most men who have it, seborrhea progresses through three stages:

1. Dry white scales flake off your scalp, drop to your shoulders. New flakes constantly form. It's likely you do not realize that a disease is present—but consider merely that you "have dandruff."

2. Moist sticky scales appear on scalp. In many cases, hairs begin to die before reaching full growth. Your hair has begun to thin, so subtly that at first you may not notice it.

2ND STAGE

Scales become sticky. Microbacilli shown may be present.

3. "Choking" of hair roots with fatty substance from glands, dead cells and dirt may occur. Result is increasingly thin hair, often baldness.

New scalp hygiene method

This progression of scalp disease points to the danger of neglecting excessive dandruff, or only taking half measures.

Watch your general health. If you're "run down," see your doctor. Apart from that—give your hair and scalp the right kind of care. Here is an easy home program—the Kreml Method—long used professionally by leading barbers and hairdressers, newly introduced for home use. It costs no more than the use of ordinary hair preparations.

3RD STAGE

Microbacilli shown may be present. Hair growth may be affected.

Tonight, shake Kreml Hair Tonic generously on to your head. Make sure your hair is thoroughly wet with Kreml. Massage scalp vigorously. Next, apply your favorite shampoo. Work up a thick lather—without putting any water on your head. The lather comes easily if you have used enough Kreml Hair Tonic.

Complete your shampoo, rinse with water, dry hair thoroughly. Then—shake on plenty more Kreml, massage it in, comb hair in place.

EVERYDAY use important

Give your scalp a Kreml massage every morning, before combing hair in place. Takes only a few seconds. There is no permanent "cure" for dandruff. So make Kreml your daily hair-care habit. Use it as generously as you need—Kreml does not make hair sticky or stiff, or unpleasant to the touch.

And you'll like the tingling, waked-up feeling that a Kreml massage arouses in your scalp. You will discover that it puts real pleasure into the first minutes of the morning.

Sometimes flaking increases

At first, using Kreml may cause more dandruff flakes than usual to appear. This simply means that your scalp has a layer of dandruff which is being loosened and "chased out." In more stubborn cases, repeat the Kreml-and-shampoo treatment. In any event, continue daily use of Kreml Hair Tonic itself.

KILLS bacilli and Spores

Kreml Hair Tonic is more than just a loose dandruff remover. Kreml now contains a revolutionary new antiseptic ingredient that actually kills bacilli and Spores of Malassez on contact! And the daily use of Kreml can help prevent the recurrence of these parasites indefinitely!

The Kreml Method of scalp hygiene is not offered as a substitute for the services of a dermatologist—but it has helped many thousands of men. Their letters tell us so!

Money-back offer

Try the Kreml Method of scalp hygiene, including use of Kreml for daily care of your hair. If you are not entirely satisfied, write The J. B. Williams Company, Glastonbury, Conn. Enclose Kreml label—tell us what you paid—and we will gladly refund your money.

Get Kreml today. (And if you're low on shampoo, you could try our fine Kreml Shampoo too.) See how well the Kreml Method keeps your hair and scalp in the kind of shape you want! The J. B. Williams Company.

The film follows a new trend in the use of color, employing five color themes worked out by former Vogue Photographer Hoyningen-Huene to symbolize the traits of principal characters as well as help identify them in the mob scenes. In the steely-blue (for moonlight) harem scene above, white-gowned (for purity) Princess Fawzia does a slow burn at the sight of her intended husband's happily snoozing concubines. HOISTED IN THE AIR, THE "LANTERN" SHOWS ITS FOILS AND ITS SMALL PROPELLER

BOATS THAT FLY ATOP THE WATER

Hydrofoil may be greatest advance 'since steam over sail'

Some of the strangest boats ever devised are today skimming over the waters like water bugs, their hulls appearing to float ethereally above the surface (see cover). This waterborne flight is made possible by hydrofoils, literally "water wings," finlike structures attached to the hull by struts. When the boat is at rest or moving slowly, the hydrofoils extend down into the water. But when the boat picks up speed, the water moving past the hydrofoil creates greater pressure on bottom than on top and, as in an airplane wing, produces "lift." The foil rises toward the surface, pushing the boat up so that it rides along as if on stilts. The U.S. and Canadian navies are experimenting busily with hydrofoils, which would be especially useful as assault craft or rescue boats. Eventually they might be used on ocean liners, and in a burst of enthusiasm one admiral has said that aircraft carriers may someday have them to provide a fast landing platform for supersonic jets.

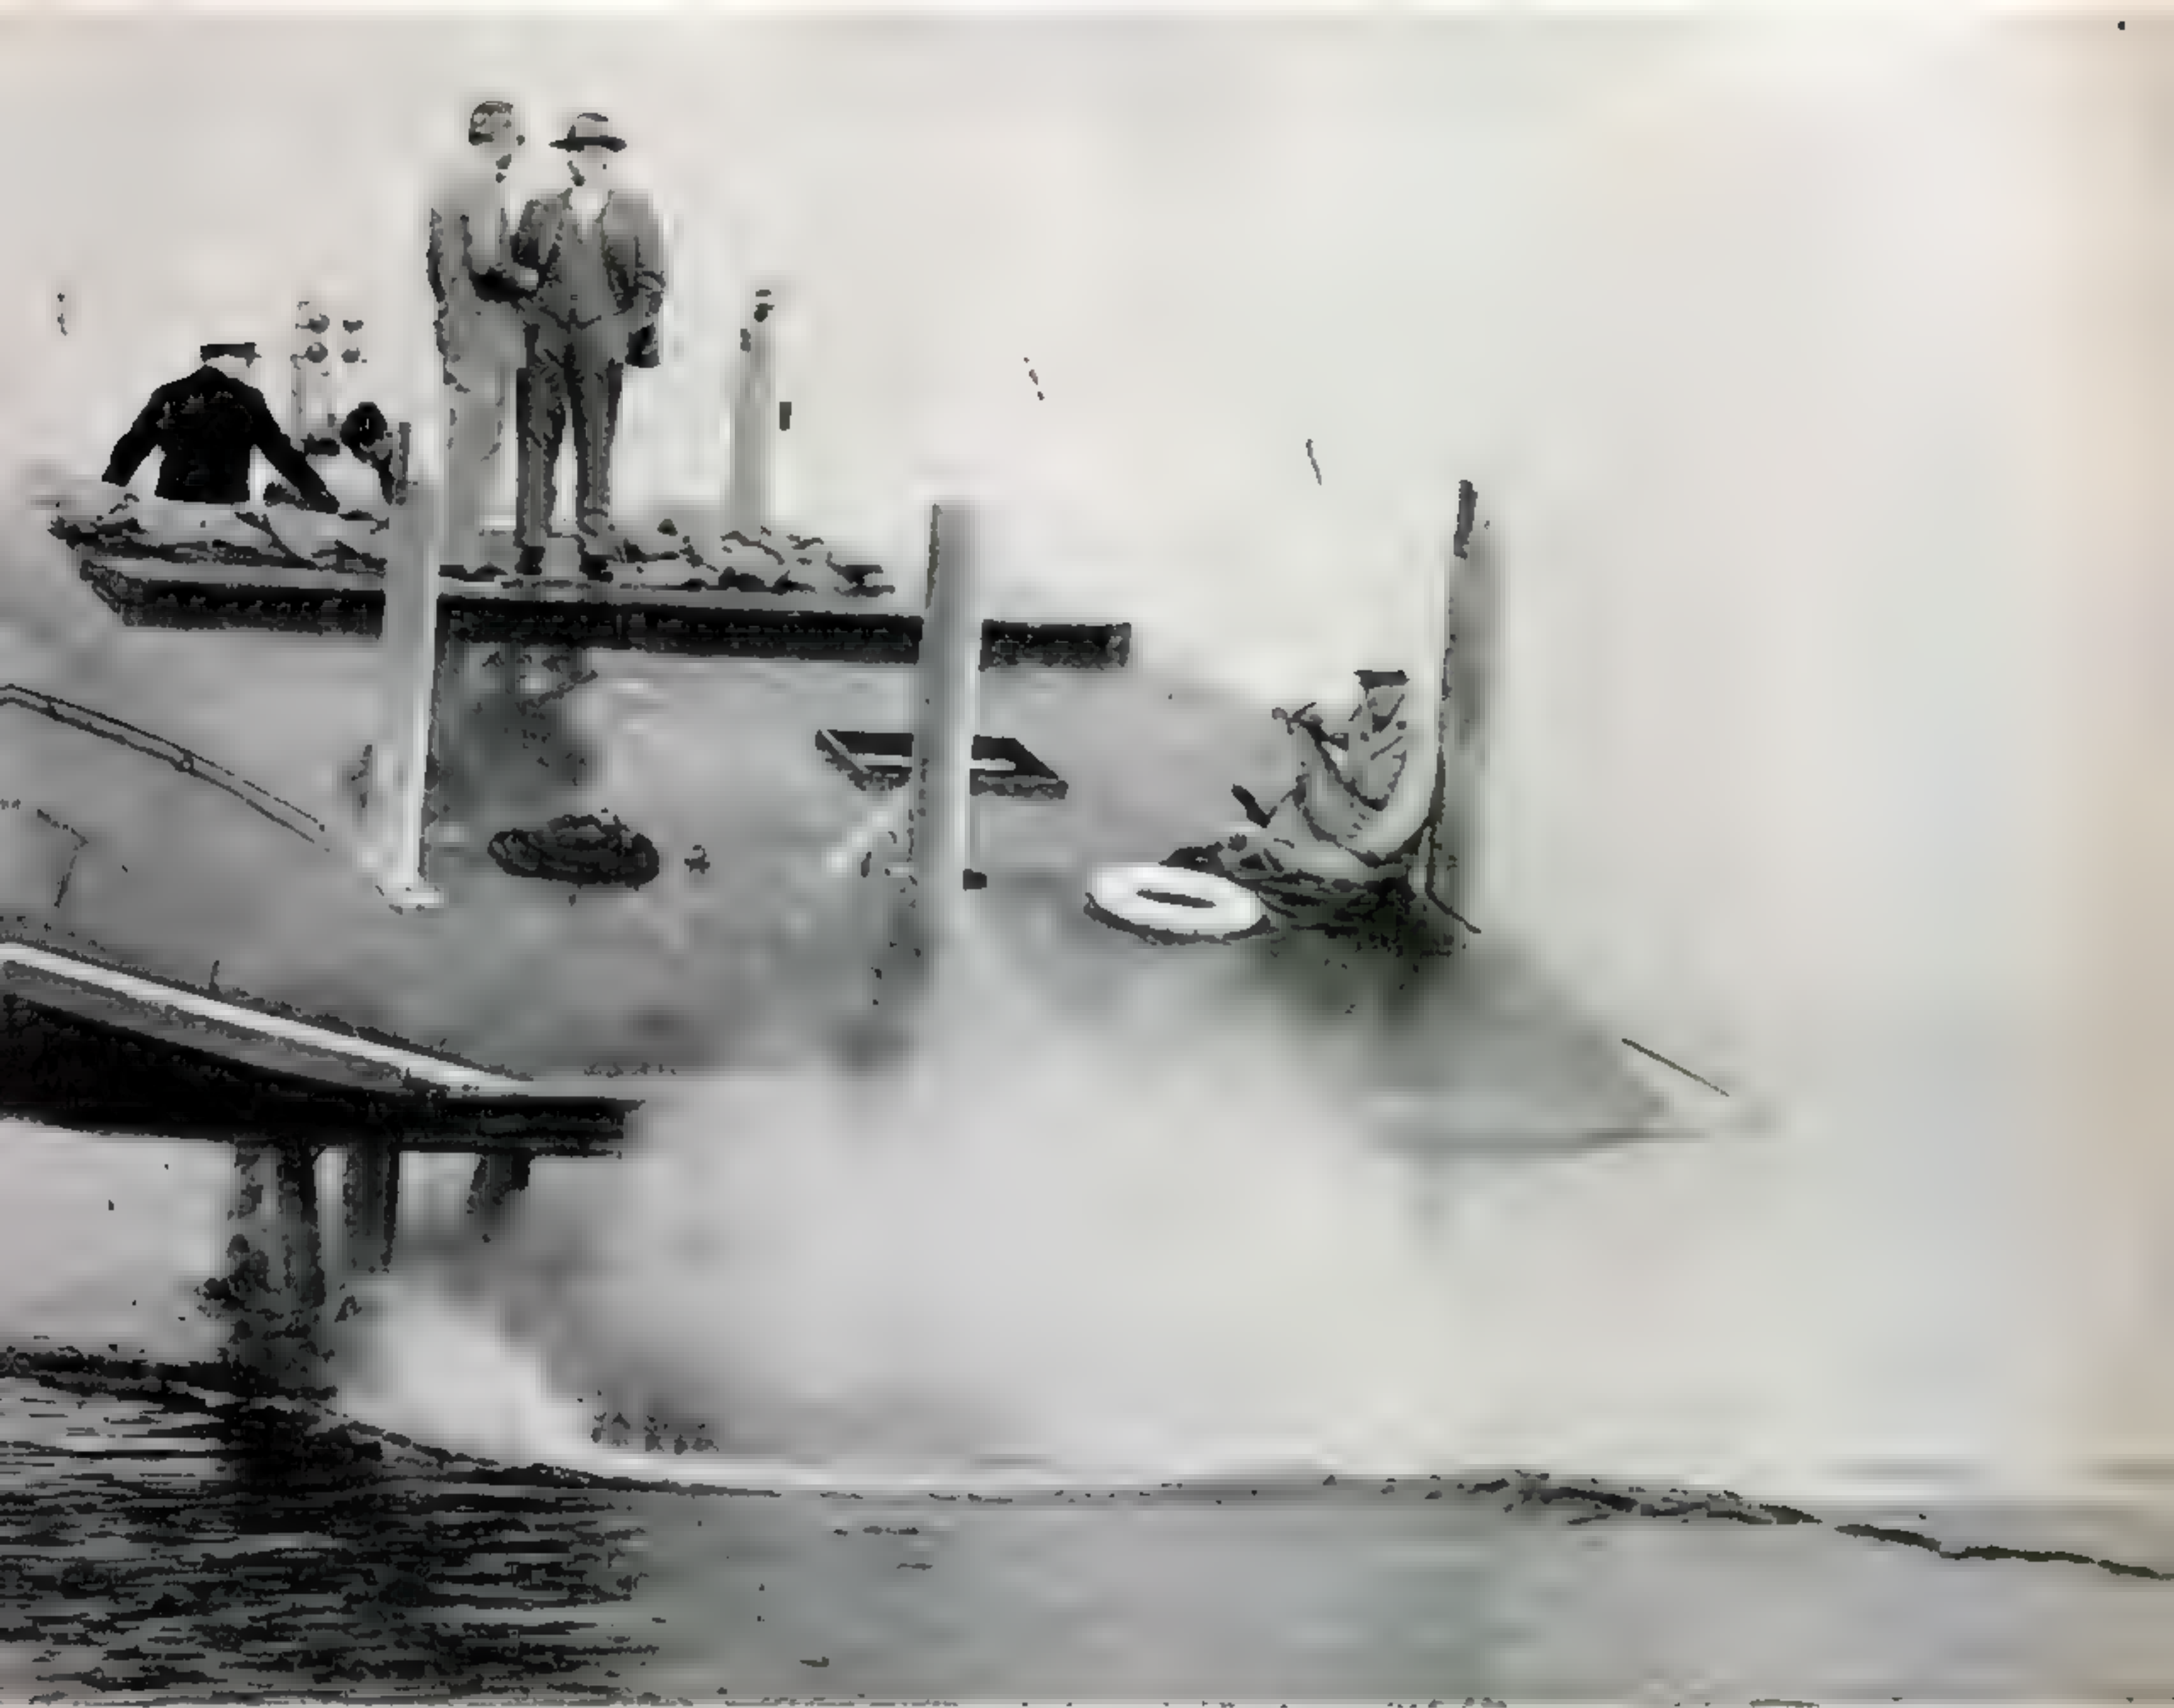

Hydrofoil boats are far faster potentially than conventional speedboats since they almost eliminate the age-old problem of "drag" or resistance from the water's friction on the boat's hull. They are also more comfortable since they are able to ride above most moderate-sized waves. But problems plague hydrofoil boats. The gear on some models limits maneuverability in shallow, crowded harbors, and the slightest miscalculation in designing the foils can make a boat highly unstable. But with these problems now almost licked, says a builder, boat design is about to see "the first real advance since steam took over from sail."

BIGGEST U.S. NAVY MODEL in tonnage, the Lantern, was built by the Hydrofoil Corporation of

CANADIAN HYDROFOIL is called the "KC-B" after F. W. ("Casey") Baldwin, an early Canadian designer (p. 58). Shown here on a trial run around the Halifax harbor, the KC-B is equipped with ladderlike hydrofoil structures (shown on cover), mounting the "rungs" one by one as it gets up speed. It can do 60 mph.

becomes foilborne at 15 mph, cruises at 24 mph and can do 42 mph. The company's president says

Lander's smooth stable ride is "the most monotonous way of getting around that I can think of."

NAVY'S FASTEST HYDROFOIL, the John H. Carl & Sons' XCH-1, is equipped with two 450-hp airplane engines which can drive it at a speed well over 40 mph.

RETRACTABLE GEAR of XCH-1 pulls up so that the craft can navigate in shallow harbors. A third hydrofoil at the stern helps stabilize and steer the craft.

ALEXANDER GRAHAM BELL at 72 takes helm of his revolutionary craft for a test in Halifax harbor with co-designer Casey Baldwin (left) and Baldwin's son.

REVIVAL OF OLD IDEA

The idea of using winglike structures for boats occurred to designers soon after the discovery of air flight. The first hydrofoil patents were recorded in 1905. Wilbur and Orville Wright experimented with a hydrofoil boat in 1907. In 1919, three years before his death, Alexander Graham Bell, working with Canadian designer Casey Baldwin, built a revolutionary craft (left and below) much like those seen today. But the design problems and competition from conventional craft caused interest in hydrofoils to lag in the 1920s and '30s. The renewed U.S. interest today has been caused by the enthusiasm of a handful of hydrofoil designers and by competitive designs from other countries (bottom). The U.S. Navy now has hydrofoil contracts with five shipbuilders and four U.S. universities.

LIKE A DITCHED DIRIGIBLE, BELL'S HD-4 LOOKED CUMBERSOME AS IT LAY AT ANCHOR. BUT ITS 350-HP AIRPLANE ENGINES DROVE IT FASTER THAN 75 MPH

GERMAN PATROL BOAT, the 17-ton VS-6, was built during World War II but Allied bombing and heavy demands for other craft prevented full development.

GERMAN TOURIST BOAT, the Schertel PT-30, now carries passengers on short sightseeing rides over Lake Maggiore in Switzerland. It uses V-shaped foils.

CANADA GETS A NEW HEROINE

The impressive array of goods shown on the preceding page—including an automobile, movie camera, wrist watch, two chinchillas worth $1,000 apiece, a diamond ring, silver tea service, matched luggage, two typewriters, a month's supply of meat and a collie dog—comprise only a portion of the spoils that 16-year-old Marilyn Bell got for the most rewarding swim in history.

Until a few days before Marilyn Bell was practically unknown. A likable schoolgirl, she sang in the choir, played badminton and liked long-distance swimming. When Florence Chadwick, the channel swimmer, undertook to swim across Lake Ontario on the promise that she would get $10,000 if she made the 32-mile stretch, Marilyn decided to tag along for the "honor of Canada." When the American star and two otherswimmers gave up, Marilyn had the lake all to herself. A fleet of boats swarmed around as she bucked waves and wind, and word of her struggle swept across Canada as radio stations gave a stroke-by-stroke report on her progress. Four times Marilyn went under and almost gave up. But exhortations and pep messages chalked on a blackboard (below) kept her going. When she reached shore after 21 hours in the water a quarter of a million Canadians were waiting there to acclaim her. Cash gifts for Marilyn had already exceeded $20,000 when, a few days later, Toronto gave the new darling of the Dominion a bigger reception than it had given Queen Elizabeth four years ago.

VICTORIOUS MARILYN

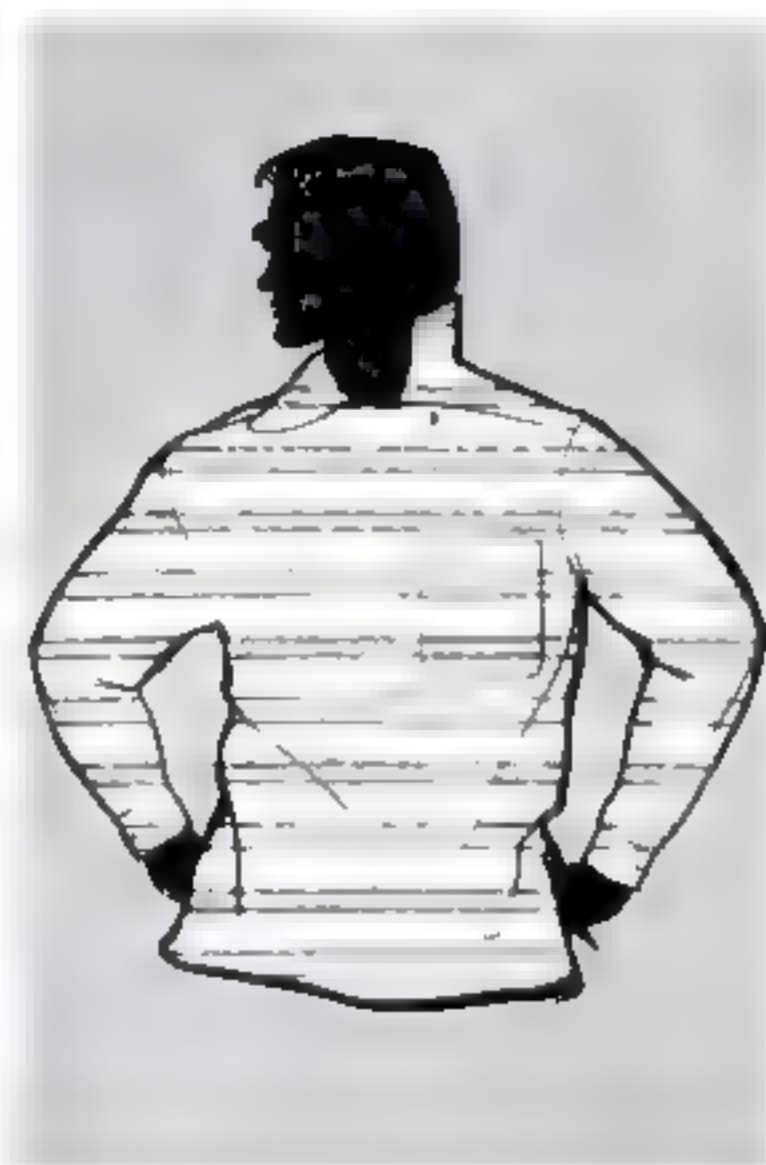

INSPIRING MESSAGES were marked on blackboard. She drank hot soup and syrup to keep up her strength. At end of swim, the lake grew very rough.

THE LAST STROKE, which for most of the 21 hours came at 50 a minute, brings Marilyn to sea wall on Canadian shore. All told, she swam 36 miles.

Marilyn on the Town

STAR MAKES MANHATTAN INTO AN ISLE OF JOY

New Yorkers who normally take their celebrities with a polite head-turn or a cynical stare really flipped last week. The celebrity producing this emotional turnabout was Marilyn Monroe, in town to shoot two little location sequences for her new movie Seven Year Itch, made from the Broadway hit.

The big-town stampede started when Miss Monroe landed at Idlewild Airport, where 500 spectators, mostly airline employees, put on a small mob scene to get at her. In the city whistling crowds pursued Marilyn along the streets, into automobiles, nightclubs and the theater. One of her movie scenes, at an East 61st Street brownstone, made a thousand early morning passers-by late for work as they delightedly stopped to watch Marilyn, clad in a scanty slip, peer out a second-story window (left). Said Marilyn, "All I said was six words: 'Hi! I just washed my hair.' Of course, maybe you won't consider 'Hi!' a word." Two days later exhausted Marilyn went back to Hollywood, where the shots could have been made with far less trouble but not nearly so much fanfare and fun.

FROM UPPER WINDOW in a midtown Manhattan flat Marilyn smiles down on her screaming fans.

"SKIN SMOOTHER" BUILT IN!

For hundreds of years skin specialists have known that nothing in nature equals lanolin (found only in the wool of sheep), as a skin conditioner. The softness, smoothness, and quick healing of the skin on wool-handlers' hands told them that.

So efforts have long been made to blend lanolin into shaving preparations, so it could work its wonders on the inevitable "roughing up" your skin takes from the sharpest razor. But no way could be found to combine enough pure lanolin with shaving cream ingredients to be completely effective.

Williams' discovery—Lanthra 25

LANTHRA 25 is the Williams name for an extract of lanolin which concentrates its magic skin-smoothing elements 25 times.

In this concentrated form even a small amount of Williams Instant Lather carries enough lanolin to your face to smooth the way for your razor, and leave your face feeling softer, more fit and supple,

Ribaldry in Medieval Churches

SEATS HIDE DROLL SCULPTURES

Though it is not mentioned in many guidebooks, some of the most unusual and exquisite medieval art can be found under the seats in the pews of English and European cathedrals and parish churches. These seats usually had pivots or hinges so that they could be turned up, like modern theater seats. Under each one was a small projecting ledge called a misericord, or "a indulgence," because invalids or crippled persons, or even the clergy, could lean on them when they grew tired of standing during the hours-long medieval church services. Restricted to serious treatment of religious subjects in most other parts of the cathedrals, the medieval artists let themselves go in carving the misericords. With a lively sense of humor, they sculptured earthy versions of biblical happenings along with some ribald and risqué versions of the everyday life around them.

SETTING FOR CARVINGS is pew seats, here folded up to show the misericord ledges. This is Church of the Holy Trinity at Stratford-on-Avon in England.

why PORK prices are LOWER now

Lower prices this fall are the result of much more plentiful supply—which is the result of a chain of events that started over a year ago.

1. It takes corn to make pork. But the last time there was a bumper pig crop, hog prices came way down while corn prices stayed up. As a result, many farmers decided that it wouldn't pay to turn as much corn into pork the next year, and pork production dropped 20%.

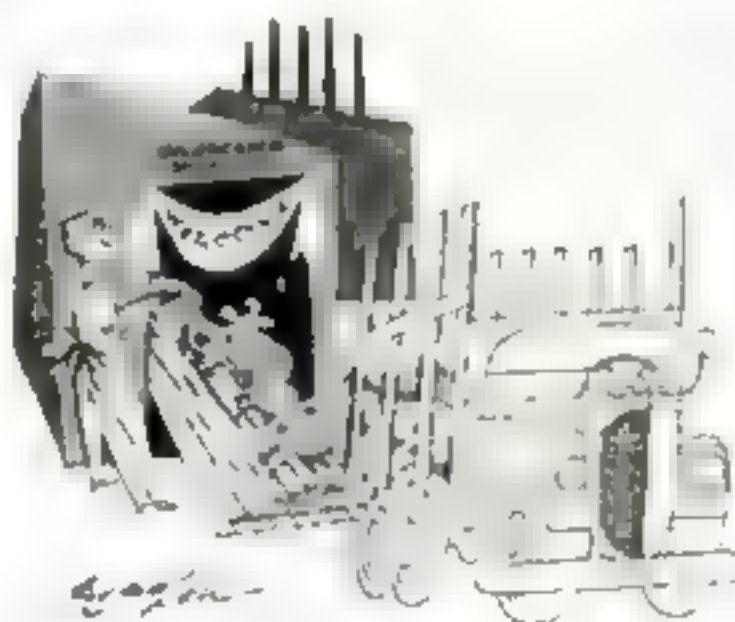

2. Then last winter, when pork supplies were low (we'd eaten ourselves nearly out of it), demand stayed high. So prices started going up—up—up!

3. But the higher prices showed, though, that people wanted—and were able to buy—a lot more pork than they'd been getting.

4. So growers decided to boost their hog production. Last spring they started 56 million pigs eating their way to market. (6¼ million more than the year before.) Meanwhile, pork got even more scarce because it takes about 6 months for a piglet to grow to pork-chop size.

5. These spring-crop porkers started coming to market early this fall. They'll keep coming, in plentiful numbers, for the next few months. By the time they're all brought to market, another pig crop, started this fall, will be ready to sell.

6. When we start getting more of any kind of meat than there has been, and demand remains about the same, prices just naturally come down. That's happening now on pork. And when consumers help themselves to the values that go with these larger seasonal supplies, we help to give livestock men the assurances they need to grow meat we'll need later on.

MISERICORDS IN THE U.S.

Misericords can also be found in Hartford, Conn. in a chapel donated to Trinity College by the late William G. Mather, a steel company executive who graduated from there in 1877. Two of the carvings at Trinity are under the seats as in the European churches. Others are on the arms of the pews. While some of them deal with religious subjects, most express college traditions with a distinctly American flavor.

FOOTBALL is memorialized in misericord by carving of player making a catch. Professors and clergy but not the student body sit in these pews.

BASEBALL is represented by catcher crouching in front of umpire. Other figures on pews include campus dog, janitor, studious scholar and Father Time.

PROFESSOR suggests a typical absent-minded teacher—no one in particular. The carvings were done by a Boston firm between 1935 and 1940.

From the cleansing depths of the ocean ...fresh-caught whole fish

Puss 'n Boots fleets catch fish fresh from the depths, just for cats. These fish, usually netted at night, are unloaded at Puss 'n Boots canneries by sun-up. Here the whole fish—with all its incomparably wholesome elements left intact—is thoroughly ground, mixed with palatable cereals, and pressure-cooked in the can. No part of the fish caught by Puss 'n Boots ships—not even the costly fillets—is ever set aside for human consumption. JUST FOR CATS

That is why Puss 'n Boots Cat Food furnishes the unsurpassed benefits of food kept pure and healthful by nature...why it assures beauty, pep, better growth.

Of all the things you can feed your cat, there is probably no single food from any source that will nourish him as well as fresh-caught, whole fish. This is so, biologists report, for two reasons: natural life balance, and natural purity.

Natural life balance in whole fish

The whole fish represents nature's own ideal balance of life-giving factors. Puss 'n Boots Cat Food, made from fresh-caught whole fish (not from by-products), retains that balance, as it existed in the living fish.

Natural purity of fresh-caught fish

Whole fish, fresh from the sea—the only kind ever used in Puss 'n Boots—is completely, naturally free of organisms which might harm your cat. (This is acknowledged by public health agencies in a most revealing way: deep-sea fishing requires far less supervision than almost any other food-processing industry.) This assured purity of the fish in Puss 'n Boots is another safeguard for your cat's health.

Puss 'n Boots is convenient to serve

Puss 'n Boots comes ready-to-serve from the can, with nothing for you to cook or mix. Why not get a week's supply next time you go shopping? Feed it regularly—your cat's new grace, beauty and vigor will warm your heart!

HOW THE BATHYSCAPHE OPERATES UNDER THE SEA

In the eternal darkness of the sea floor the cruising bathyscaphe lives a deep water life in the glare of its lights. The ship is not from any ties to the surface and can rise or sink through the water like a free balloon through the air. It consists basically of a submarine-shaped 20,000-gallon tank of gasoline, divided into connected compartments which supports the crew. A 2-ton steel gondola, containing the crew, is suspended from the lighter than water, and floats up the bathyscaphe. Preparing to dive, the crew descends from the conning tower (1) down the ladder of the vertical air lock (2) into the gondola. After the hatch at the top of the sea has been closed, and the gondola's main door (3) locked behind them, sea and air tanks (4) are flooded with sea water. The bathyscaphe then begins to sink.

During the descent the increasing pressure causes the gasoline (than in air) to sink. To prevent the gas tank from being (1) from buckling as the gasoline contracts, an open intake pipe (5) in the (6) allows seawater to flood slowly into the central gas compartment (6), thus equalizing the pressure inside and out. As the bathyscaphe nears the ocean floor, iron pellets used as ballast are released from (7) until the craft comes to rest a few feet above the bottom. Dragging a

A VERTICAL VOYAGE TO THE BOTTOM OF THE SEA

Eyewitness describes sights and sensations of a 1½-mile dive in France's record-breaking underwater craft, the bathyscaphe

by KENNETH MACLEISH

As unknown areas of land grow fewer, man's curiosity turns to the sea. Instruments have revealed many of its secrets, but men have long sought an effective machine from which to view its depths at first hand. The finest yet devised is the bathyscaphe (left), conceived by Professor Auguste Piccard and perfected by the French navy's brilliant Undersea Research Group, headed by Commander Philippe Tailliez. Two have been built: the Trieste, in which Piccard dove 10,300 feet, and F.N.R.S. 3, in which Commander Georges Houot and Lieut. Pierre Willm dropped to a record 13,300 feet. LIFE was generously granted permission to send Associate Editor Kenneth MacLeish on a plunge which turned out to be the world's third deepest.

AUTHOR ENTERS BATHYSCAPHE

FOR four days we had waited for the strong surge of the sea wind to slacken. Now, at 3:15 on the morning of the fifth day, the edge of the sea stirred quietly along the shore and the restless fronds of the date palms in the garden were still. The wind had died. In an hour we would head for the open Mediterranean. In six more we would dive into its lightless depths. I looked out from the window of our small Toulon hotel, which, by an eerie coincidence, happened to have been Jules Verne's home. The great teller of undersea tales must sometimes have stood where I stood, watching the water. He could only imagine scenes in the reaches of the deep. I would soon be allowed actually to see them.

Within seconds of the appointed hour Commander Houot appeared in the empty lobby, a lean, tall figure in oil-stained Navy grays and sandals. I followed him to his car, ridiculously burdened with a commuter's briefcase. We drove through deserted streets, through the silent navy yard, to a pier guarded by armed men and barbed wire. This was the bathyscaphe's berth.

She lay gleaming under floodlights and swarming with men. Already the two heavy launches that would maneuver us into the roadstead were lashed on either side of the bow. A hundred yards away our mother ship, the Liamone, glided by. Her engines throbbed softly as she made for the harbor breakwater where she would take us in tow.

We boarded the bathyscaphe and stood in single file along her narrow steel deck. I glanced at Houot's petty officer, a gloomy and knowledgeable Norman named Rost. He was looking east, where the first light of dawn silhouetted the horizon. Turning to me, he said, "Undoubtedly you will dive today." Then to the commander, "I would like some time when one is through with the press to make a dive. Just a small dive, you understand, only a little deeper than the regular divers go. It would, after all, be something." He turned and entered the conning tower to check over details on which our lives would depend.

A half-hour later, while the bathyscaphe rode smoothly astern on her monstrous towline, we sat in the Liamone's wardroom drinking powerful navy coffee and admiring framed photographs taken at a nearby nudist guide chain (8) to keep a more or less steady altitude, the bathyscaphe cruises horizontally at ¼ mph, driven by twin screws (9) powered by a pair of 1,300-pound batteries (10). Crew looking through thick Plexiglas porthole (11) studies sea life under the glare of 2,000-watt lights (12). When the guide chain is dropped the bathyscaphe rises to the surface. In emergencies extra ballast box (13) is emptied and batteries are jettisoned down skids (14).

colony. The Liamone's skipper offered us berths, and we accepted gratefully. It would be five hours or more before we reached our dive site over the deep water a dozen miles south of Toulon.

I awoke to the hiss of rolling water and scrambled out of my bunk for an anxious look at the sea. If the swells were running too high, we might have to call off the dive. We had had to once before. But the wind was still light and the surface only moderately rough. Whitecaps glistened occasionally against the bright blue of the Mediterranean and the morning sun shone out of a clean, polished sky. I saw Houot in the stern, watching wind and water with thoughtful eyes.

"Look all right to you?" I asked.

"We'll make it," he said. "A little rough, with those cursed steep-sided swells, but we'll manage." Then, looking astern he said, "Here comes the launch with Commander Tailliez and the frogmen. They'll join us when we reach the diving site," (he glanced at his watch) "which will be in five minutes. Will you be ready?"

The question was a polite order. I hurried back to my bunk amidships, experiencing the not altogether unpleasant visceral sensation of an aviation cadet about to solo. I checked over my gear: a Contax camera with a fast lens and ultra-fast film, a Panon wide-angle camera, a pocket-sized Minifon wire recorder, extra film, lenses and spools of wire (wrapped in socks), a small flask of good brandy for after lunch and a book of bagpipe music I had meant to leave ashore. I put the cameras and Minifon into a rubber bag, taped it shut and put it back in the briefcase. Even if I fell in during transfer my equipment would still work.

Astern the big towline lay slack. As the Liamone wallowed in the trough, a small wooden lifeboat was lowered over the side. Houot, Rost, three sailors and I dropped into it between waves. Minutes later we were alongside the bathyscaphe. Houot boarded first, running up the deck to the conning tower and vanishing suddenly down the ladder inside the "sas"—the vertical 15-foot air lock through which the sphere is reached. I followed, taking a position at the top of the sas from which I could watch what went on until the commander called me below.

Divers were already at work removing the locks that had secured our ballast during our trip out from shore. Two of them surfaced suddenly on our lee side, grinning up out of the bright water. One of them spat out his mouthpiece. "Bonjour, Monsieur," he said politely. "You're very lucky to be going down to so great a depth. More than 7,000 feet! What an experience!" He put back his mouthpiece and vanished with a flip of his fins, followed by his partner. In five minutes they were back, each carrying a string of iron clamps. Rost joined them on the afterdeck and carefully counted the clamps, then counted them again. I appreciated his thoroughness. If one of those locks remained in place during our dive it would make it impossible for us to drop one section of our ballast—which might conceivably make the difference between coming back up and staying down permanently.

Commander Houot's voice boomed up from the bottom of the sas, calling me to join him. I took a last fond look about me. The sun sparkled off the sea and the mountains were misty on the distant shore. I turned and started down. Gripping my briefcase in one hand and the slippery ladder rungs with the other, I descended through the narrow vertical passage until both feet rested on the open door of the sphere. Here the sound of the swells echoed dismally. The steel walls sweated and there was a faint smell of raw gasoline in the air. I passed my briefcase in to Houot, then crept in as he had taught me to do: feet first, flat on my back, one shoulder ahead of the other, down a step and forward onto my knees. Having performed this serpentine maneuver without serious injury, I crouched in my assigned position and tried to keep out of the commander's way.

Serious-faced and obviously eager to begin his vertical voyage, Houot pulled shut the massive round door through which we had entered and began the laborious task of bolting it in place. The roaring of the sea was instantly muted. I could hear the soft hiss of oxygen and the ticking of instruments. Houot worked swiftly with a heavy socket wrench, carefully tightening the 17 bolts of the door so that it would be drawn perfectly into its conical frame. Squatting there in the cool half-light, sensing the slight but peculiar swing of the sphere and watching our only exit being closed, I had a fleeting sensation of being the co-tenant of an ambulatory tomb. Then, stooping to the small porthole beside me, I turned my eyes and my thoughts outward into the clear blue-green water. My sense of confinement vanished. It never returned.

With the door secured, Houot picked up a telephone hanging on the wall and whistled into it. Rost answered from the conning tower. Houot ordered him to flood the upper air chambers. Turning to the radio, he asked Commander Tailhez for permission to dive. Permission was granted. He twisted a group of valves that would let our air-lock entrance fill with water. He phoned up to Rost: "The water is rising in the sas. We should sink in a few moments."

I could hear the metallic ring of Rost's voice over the phone. "Alors," he answered. "Au revoir, commandant."

We knew that Rost and his men would stand by in the lifeboat until we had vanished from sight, and that for a while the divers would circle us like protective fish, alert for any sign of danger. Houot radioed the launch to tell its skipper that we would surface at 4:30 p.m. (it was now 9:30) and to ask him to let us know how quickly we were sinking.

In a series of calls the launch kept us informed of our condition: "The water is now at the base of the aftermast. . . The water has now reached the lower edge of the conning tower. . . Now it is up to the base of your radio antenna . . . The water is now — ching the — enna itself." The last message was silenced in spots as passing waves cut off our reception. But, strangely, with only a few inches of the conning tower above the water, we started to rise again. The launch's radio opened up: "Twelve inches of the conning tower have emerged . . . 15 now. . ."

Houot shrugged. "We will have to release some gasoline," he told me. Reluctantly he twisted the valves that would let it escape from one of the tanks over our heads. The buoyancy of the gasoline, which is lighter than water, would supply the lift needed for our return to the surface, and releasing it was like losing blood. Yet we knew that we could let go a few hundred liters without serious danger since we could compensate later for the loss by dropping an extra few hundred pounds of ballast. Once again we started down. Again the radio cut in and out. Then it went dead in the middle of a word. I "took notes" by speaking into the Minifon:

"We're down . . . The commander has turned off the gasoline . . . The small pressure gauge is moving steadily now—50 feet down, 55, up again for some reason, now 60, holding 60, 65, 70 . . . The blue-green light I see through the port is dimmer now, at 100 feet . . . 110 feet now, and the water is dim with the appearance of late evening . . . Still blue . . . We're around 250 to 300 feet now. The small pressure gauge is hard up against its stop (it only reads up to 200), and the big one is just beginning to show a reading. The light is extremely dim, a dark blue, no green left in it. . ."

The rocking motion of the sphere ceased as soon as we dropped below the surface. The bathyscaphe rode steady as a ship in dry dock. I felt no physical sensation of increasing depth, since the 3½-inch shell of steel supported entirely the vast pressures of the deep. My breathing remained normal, sustained by pure oxygen gushing into the sphere. Trays of soda lime hidden out of the way among the instruments absorbed the carbon dioxide we exhaled. Only the motion of particles in the water outside, rising straight up through the glowing cone of our floodlights, gave direct evidence of our downward course.

I glanced around the interior of the sphere at the devices designed to protect us—or at least the bathyscaphe—in case of trouble. There was the master ballast release, which would not only empty our expendable ballast tanks but would also cut loose our emergency ballast, our guide chain and the two huge batteries up on deck if, for some reason, we should want to climb in a hurry. There was the automatic ballast release which would send us surfaceward at the end of 12 hours in case we should be unable to

$5 a week does double duty... savings PLUS insurance

It's so nice to have a man around the house . . . for service above and beyond the call of duty. That's the same kind of service United of Omaha's 20-20 Plan can give your budget.

Here at last is a plan that puts financial security easily within your reach. Each dollar you invest does DOUBLE DUTY . . . buys DOUBLE benefits. For $5 a week, you can enjoy 20 years of family insurance protection, and at the end of that time, collect 20 years of cash savings.

If, for example, you are age 25 when you begin making annual deposits of $260 (an average of $5 a week), the 20-20 Plan will provide these benefits:

1. The security of $8012 of life insurance . . . protecting your family for 20 years.
2. Cash savings for retirement. Your annual $260 deposits total $5200 cash in 20 years, and that's your refund—$5200 to use as you see fit.

3. Or, instead of taking a refund, you can let your money grow until you are 65 or older—then collect considerably more than the sum of your original deposits. It is also possible to take just a part of the cash—and leave the rest in paid-up life insurance.

These are but a few of the ways that United of Omaha's 20-20 Plan protects your future. Check column at right to learn how this flexible plan serves you now . . . and in the years ahead.

If you are in good health and can save $2, $5, $10, or more a week, there's a 20-20 Plan to meet your needs . . . at any age between 1 and 55. Get full information today by mailing the coupon.

MASSSES OF PLANKTON, illuminated by floodlights, seen through porthole between two and three thousand feet down, made the sea look like soup.

press the right buttons (because of, say, suffocation). There was still another automatic ballast release which would operate if the sphere became flooded. "Of no great interest to the passengers," Houot explained wryly, "but at least it gets the bathyscaphe back to the Navy."

There were indicators that showed the level of sea water in the gas tanks, the amount of oxygen left, the condition of the air we breathed, pressure within the sphere, temperatures inside and out, the amount of disposable ballast available, and the state of our batteries. Unless the sphere sprang a leak (hardly likely since it had withstood far greater pressures) or the gasoline-filled hull struck something solid (hardly possible between the top and bottom of the sea), we were sure of a safe return to the surface. Unless, of course, our oxygen apparatus failed. Or unless one of the outside lights imploded, causing a shock wave that would shatter the hull like an eggshell. Or unless we hit the bottom too hard and got stuck in the mud. All very unlikely. Sitting here 1,000 feet down, sinking smoothly through utter darkness toward a region that only a half-dozen people had ever seen, it seemed to me that the risk involved was trifling, a cheap price to pay for so great an adventure.

Our downward speed had reached about one foot per second and was gradually increasing as mounting water pressure reduced the volume of our gasoline, let in more sea water and robbed us of our buoyancy. Commander Houot pressed one of the ballast-control buttons, releasing several hundred pounds of iron shot which poured down over the sphere in a cloud of rust, making a sound like rain on a roof. We decelerated slowly. I talked into my Minifon again:

"We're at about 2,100 feet now . . . I can see beautiful shrimp-like creatures, some with long feelers. The plankton here is so dense that it looks like a fine driving snow rushing upward. The water is like a soup. It seems to be half composed of living things . . . 2,800 feet; this is fascinating; I see big crustaceans with fiery eyes glowing in the floodlight beam. Some are scarlet. I can see many jellyfish and thousands of minute creatures showing only as specks of light."

A little later, at Houot's suggestion, I reached over to the battery of switches at my right and snapped off the outside lights. The glowing cone vanished. My entire field of vision took on the appearance of a midnight sky, studded with moving, multicolored stars. The small sea creatures passing in silent succession beyond the port glowed with pale luminescence, most of them a ghostly yellow-green, some of them pink, some yellow. I flipped on the outside lights again, so as not to miss any large nonluminescent animal that might swim by, and looked up at the pressure gauge above my head. It read 1,400 meters (4,600 feet) and had begun to drip slightly. Then there was a sharp explosion behind me.

I swung around as fast as my cramped legs would permit. Houot held a bottle in one hand, a corkscrew in the other. "Lunch time," he said. "Have some wine."

We ate in silence for a little while. I was struck by the incongruity of this act of dining so casually in the depths of the sea. To travel beyond the natural realm of man in tight-nerved discomfort was one thing; to coast quietly out of it eating pâté sandwiches

You don't really know this woman. But the chances are you know and admire someone very much like her. A woman serenely poised and sure of herself under any circumstances.

The reason is simple. She refuses to be put into a position where avoidable personal problems might bother her. For example: she long ago discarded external sanitary protection on two counts... odor and chafing. She realizes that those two hazards simply do not exist with Tampax.

For Tampax is worn internally. It eliminates belts, pins, pads. It is particularly advantageous when you're away from home. Disposal is simple. (Even the applicator is disposable.) Month's supply can be carried in the purse. And of course you don't have to remove the Tampax when you're taking your shower or tub.

MAN AT BOTTOM OF SEA, Commander Houot watches the compass to guide bathyscaphe as it cruises just off ocean floor.

and drinking good red wine was another. Houot unwrapped a second sandwich. "You know," he said slowly and thoughtfully over the crackle of the wrapping paper, "this is the only vehicle in the world in which one is completely alone. Airplanes have communication, and they can see and be seen. Here, we are out of sight, out of touch. No one knows where we are or what we are doing. No one can reach us or detect us. "He paused and said, "And if we should have trouble, no one can help us, for we are beyond the depths to which men can travel. We are completely on our own. It is a strange but wonderful feeling."

At 6,000 feet he turned on the Fathometer. With its 660-foot range it would show us the bottom in time for us to slow down for an easy landing. At 6,300 feet it still showed nothing, but Houot let go more ballast anyhow (we had dropped more than a ton by now) and slowed us a little. At 7,000 feet the sea floor appeared on the indicator, and in a few minutes I could see it stretching away, pallid and level, under our lights. Ballasted to near-equilibrium, the great mass of the bathyscaphe came to rest with a few feet of its guide chain on the bottom. But then, after a little while, we began to sink almost imperceptibly.

The commander explained, "We are descending now because the gasoline is cooling slightly. The warmth caused by its compression is being drawn out by the colder water outside. This cooling makes us minutely heavier, and so we settle gently to the sea floor." As he spoke, the base of the sphere touched the bottom without the slightest jar. The floor of the sea, 7,700 feet down, now lay less than four feet from my eyes, gray and barren and lifeless.

By letting fall a little ballast, Houot made the bathyscaphe rise a dozen feet on its guide chain. Then he switched on the electric motors and we set off slowly across the bottom. Nothing moved in the glare of our floodlights. No current disturbed the fine mud.

SOLITARY FISH casting its shadow against the bottom was photographed by MacLeish through porthole. It was one of the few living creatures he saw on the

Even the plankton creatures were scarce, although an occasional many-legged animal drifted by, lying motionless in suspension. We came upon a pair of strange fish, supported several inches above the bottom by slender spines extending from their tails and fins. They too were immobile. We found delicate, many-armed starfish, sprawled on the bottom ooze as if in sleep, and an anchored anemone whose delicate tendrils stood petrified in the stillness. Everywhere we saw burrows leading down into the muck, each with many paths extending from it. But we saw nothing enter them or emerge from them. Our lights picked up a tangle of cloth, possibly of clothing, which lay the way a man might lie; it might once have contained a man. In endless succession, for two hours, such sights passed my porthole. Then we crossed a deep, raw, obviously new-made track across the bottom. For an instant I stared in amazement, wondering what sea monster might have left this massive track. Immediately I realized that we had crossed our own trail, that we were looking at the scar left in the mud by our dragging guide chain.

We kept up our exploration for another hour, traveling through silent and lightless places that seemed to be locked in an eternal dream. The hours passed unnoticed. At 3 o'clock, by the sun that quickened the bright world far above us, we abandoned this country of perpetual night. We did this very simply, by pressing a button. The guide chain fell away and the bathyscaphe, relieved of its weight, began to inch upward.

As we rose, our lift-giving gasoline expanded under decreasing water pressure, and our vertical speed increased. Nothing more needed to be done. At 4:20 we were only 3,300 feet below the surface. At 4:40 the water outside my port began to lighten. I recorded the moment of surfacing:

"We're up to 650 feet now. We don't know where the other ships are but we'll radio as soon as we surface. The wind may have picked up; if so we'll start to feel the waves pretty soon. Here we go! 130 feet, 120, 110, 100, 85, 80, we're coming up like a cork, 70, 65, we'll probably start rolling like hell in a minute, 50, 45, beginning to feel it, 30, we're on the surface. The commander is calling the launch. No answer. Now she answers; she hears us, doesn't see us. But the Liamone calls in; she sees us. Houot tells her to get over here fast and take us in tow. Now we must blow the water out of the sas. We have two bottles of compressed air, and one should do it. Houot cracks one of them. . . . That worked. . . . The sas is empty. We can go up as soon as he has unbolted the door."

The door bolts came out faster than they had gone in, and Houot hurried up through the sas to supervise the work on deck. I followed, dragging my silly briefcase behind me. Emerging into sweet sea air, mole-like, I blinked at the blinding light. The launch lay close by, bobbing in a rising sea. Some sailors came in with the lifeboat to take me aboard. Houot waved from the bow of the bathyscaphe, too busy to say goodbye. Commander Tailliez welcomed me with a relieved smile; we had missed our return time by 20 minutes and he had begun to worry. Later, heading into Toulon, with the strain of the waiting forgotten, Tailliez walked over and stood beside me on the bridge. Together we looked out across the Mediterranean for a few minutes. Then he turned and looked into my face carefully, almost eagerly. "How do you feel about the dive?" he asked. "What did it mean to you?"

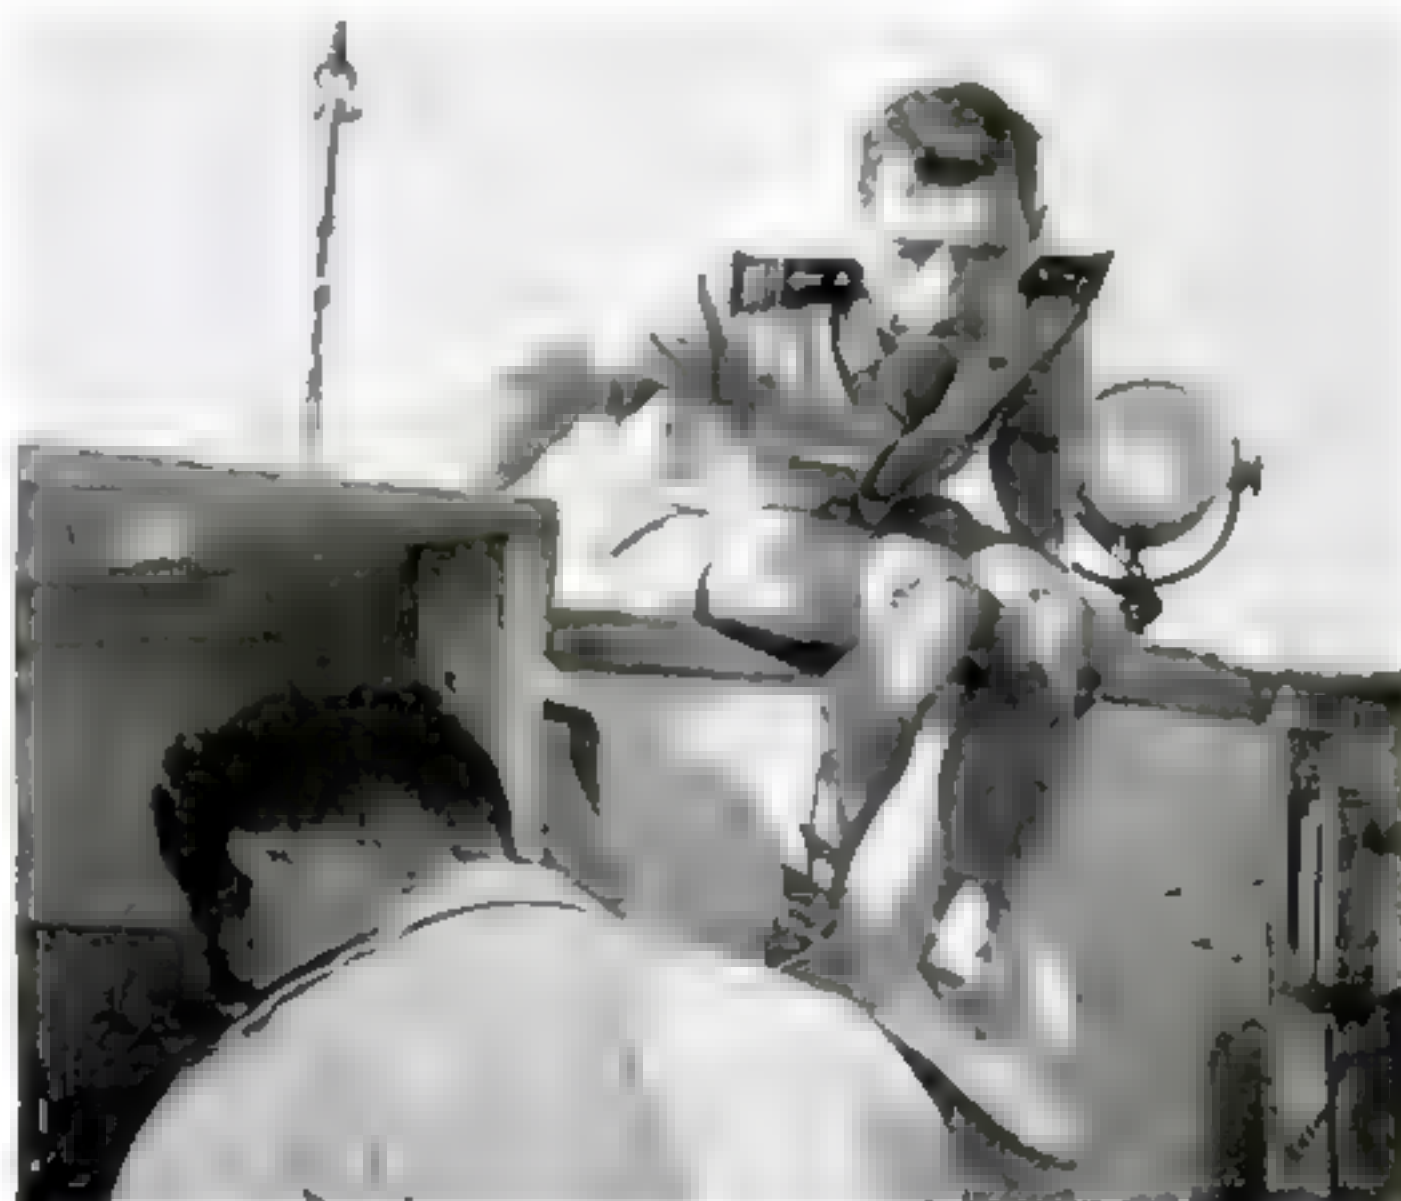

I thought a moment and said that I could not express my feelings exactly, even in my own language. "But I think I know," he said, "and you will not forget. I too have made a dive. When one goes down into the depths of the sea as we have done," he added, looking back across the whitecaps and the blue sea, "there is a change. There is a change. One is never quite the same, afterward."

STARTLING TRACK, freshly grooved into sea floor, turned out to have been made by dragging guide chain. It was seen when circling craft recrossed its path.

GIRLS FROM INDIA cross 19th Street at DuPont Circle, at the foot of Washington's "Embassy Row." Indian embassy where they work as secretaries and staff assistants require saris, but girls prefer to wear them anyway.

MEN FROM NATO, a committee of high-ranking officers from 14 North Atlantic Treaty nations, meet in this Pentagon room to discuss strategy. Presiding is British General Sir John Whitely, on left at head of the table.

A WORLD IN A CITY

Saris, strategists, varied splendor fill Washington's diplomatic scene

Photographed for LIFE by Hank Walker

Beyond the great buildings familiar to Washington, D.C. tourists, far removed from the senators and civil servants and away from the cherry blossoms, lies the intriguing and colorful community of the diplomats. Within this realm, which casual visitors see only fleetingly, a group of Indian girls in saris cross a street (left) without attracting a second glance from passersby, and officers of 14 nations can go routinely and quietly about their vitally important business of planning the defense of Western Europe (below). For those who inhabit this unusual community a stately and splendid banquet (opposite) is all in an evening's work.

Thus Washington is a meeting place of nations. In the words of the Egyptian ambassador, it is "the most important diplomatic city in the world." A shot fired in Tibet echoes in drawing rooms on 16th Street and down embassy corridors along Massachusetts Avenue. Such eminence has come to Washington largely since World War II, when the U.S. moved to the forefront of the free world. Now other nations maintain 79 embassies and legations in Washington and call upon their foremost diplomatic talents to staff them.

The embassies do not differ outwardly from other great homes in well-to-do Washington. Their wrought-iron gates, perfectly manicured lawns and neoclassic doorways look the same. Yet the doors may open onto a solemn Confucian ritual of burning incense, a group of Britons planning a cricket match or a Latin-American group toasting the birthday of Bolívar. Here LIFE presents this seldom-seen Washington world of diplomacy, including a room of the Russian embassy (fifth color page), which has never been photographed before.

INTERNATIONAL BANQUET in the Pan American Union Building's state hall of the Americas honors the retiring secretary general of the Organization of American States. The great oval table measures 40 feet long and 10 feet wide and seats 127 guests who are primarily ambassadors, delegates and their wives.

HOW TO KEEP TEACHER

Town greets newcomers with parties and presents

What with the attractions of matrimony, maternity and more money elsewhere, U.S. school boards find themselves in an endless struggle first to attract and then to keep enough teachers for their swelling enrollments. In West Hartford, Conn., teacher turnover reached such an alarming rate last year that school officials and citizens determined to try a new approach. This month at the start of the new term the school system came up with 109 new teachers to round out the staff of 444. Then the town pitched in with a welcoming square dance, house hunting and other special attentions shown on these pages to make the newcomers want to stay.

PICNIC GIFT is offered to newcomers Carolyn Gasderholm by Ray Morris, president of West Hartford Retirees Club. Official motto: Chamber of Commerce saying was "An apple for the teacher." Local official motto was "A treat for every girl."

CLASSROOM TIP is given to new music teacher Jane Marsal (left) by Ruth Wolcott, who demonstrates gestures for kindergarten song. Miss Wolcott was a "big sister," one of veteran members of faculty assigned to help new teachers get started.

Even your best friend won't tell you

The insidious thing about *halitosis (unpleasant breath) is that you, yourself, seldom realize you're guilty of it . . . and even your best friend won't tell you.

You needn't be a wallflower

Why risk offending needlessly? And why trust to lesser precautions that deodorize only momentarily? Why not let Listerine Antiseptic look after your breath with that wonderful germ-killing action? Listerine instantly stops bad breath and keeps it stopped usually for hours on end . . . four times better than any tooth paste.

No tooth paste kills odor germs like this . . . instantly

Listerine Antiseptic does for you what no tooth paste does. Listerine instantly kills bacteria . . . by millions—stops bad breath instantly, and usually for hours on end.

You see, far and away the most common cause of offensive breath is the bacterial fermentation of proteins which are always present in the mouth. And research shows that your breath stays sweeter longer, depending upon the degree to which you reduce germs in the mouth.

Listerine clinically proved

4 times better than tooth paste

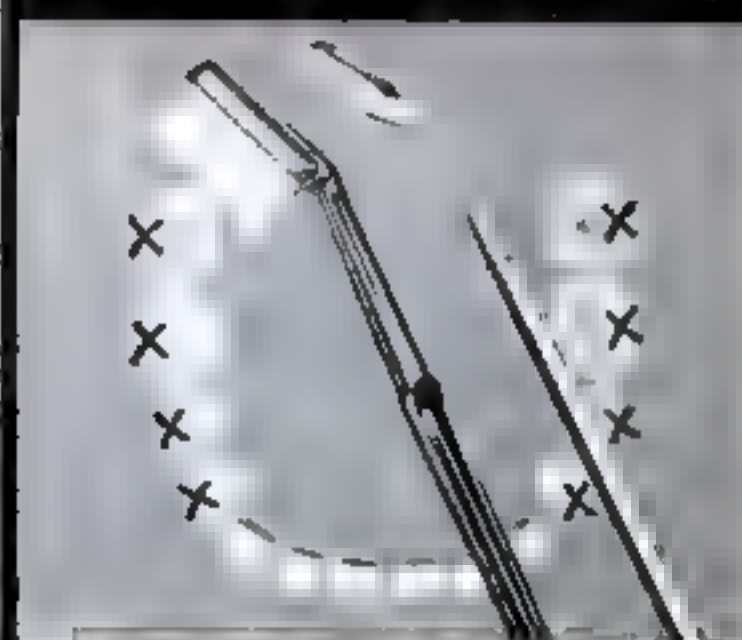

No tooth paste, of course, is antiseptic. Chlorophyll does not kill germs—but Listerine kills bacteria by millions, gives you lasting antiseptic protection against bad breath.

Is it any wonder Listerine Antiseptic in recent clinical tests averaged at least four times more effective in stopping bad breath odors than the chlorophyll products or tooth pastes it was tested against? With proof like this, it's easy to see why Listerine belongs in your home. Every morning . . . every night . . . before every date, make it a habit to always gargle Listerine, the most widely used antiseptic in the world.

IN THE WOMEN'S CELL OF JAIL MARGE AND CHUCK DEIBEL, WITH THEIR SON DANNY IN THE BUNK, INSPECT A SMALL PART OF THEIR HUGE HAUL OF NICKELS

GREAT LUCK FOR MARGE AND CHUCK

They really didn't need it, but Deibels get a Niagara of nickels

Proof positive came up last week that Americans respond not only to top dogs and underdogs, but to plain middle dogs. Marge and Chuck Deibel of Mount Pleasant, Mich., visiting New York, dropped into a CBS studio to see Carry Moore on TV. Moore picked Marge from the audience, asked her about her family, husband's business, and then out of the blue, said "Why don't we all get together and send Mrs. Deibel some money just for nothing.

... Send a nickel to Mrs. Charles Deibel."

Back home in Michigan two days later a Niagara of nickels gushed in on Marge and Chuck, who didn't really need it since he is doing pretty well selling electrical appliances. To handle more than 100,000 letters, the delighted and dazed Deibels took over two rooms in the Mount Pleasant jail, invaded a bank vault and borrowed all the counting machines in the town. Total at last counting: $7,000.

IT ALL STARTED on television. Few with Marge giving her name and home address to Carry Moore

WHO SAYS OIL AND WATER CAN'T MIX? One oil does—Charles Antell's new SUPER LANOLIN! Using high-speed mixer (see below), Antell scientist shows how new SUPER LANOLIN completely absorbs moisture. Great news for your hair, because it's moisture that softens, silken it!

ABSORPTION TEST shows (A) 3 ounces of water and 3 ounces of olive oil (could be any vegetable or mineral oil) still completely separate after high speed mixing. (B) 3 ounces of lanolin have absorbed 1 ounce of water. (C) 3 ounces of SUPER LANOLIN and 3 ounces of water completely homogenized! Proof SUPER LANOLIN is 3 times more effective than any lanolin product for carrying precious moisture onto and into hair and scalp!

New SUPER LANOLIN DEVELOPMENT

Greatest Break for Your Hair Since Lanolin Itself!

As 55 000,000 Americans know—it was Charles Antell who first broke the big story on lanolin and made it a household word in this country.

No other known substance ever did so much to protect the vital "oil-and-moisture" balance dermatologists say your hair needs for that look of luster, health, satin-softness. Reason is lanolin's unique ability among all oils (see test pictures at left) to absorb and retain moisture—an absolute necessity for hair health and beauty.

Other grooming aids, of course, followed Antell's lead... "added" lanolin, "contained lanolin" or were "fortified" with lanolin. But Charles Antell researchers had already pushed on further, probing lanolin's basic chemistry for the secret of its full potency.

Could lanolin be formulated, concentrated, refined for greater effectiveness?

It could be. And it was. Aptly named SUPER LANOLIN, Charles Antell's new exclusive development proved as superior to ordinary lanolin as lanolin is to other oils!

Tests on human hair immediately revealed SUPER LANOLIN absorbs 3 times more moisture than lanolin itself! Keeps this precious moisture in hair and scalp 3 times longer!

Result? Damaged, dehydrated hair... hair that's been dried-out, dyed-out, fried-out... comes back to life before your eyes. As with all Antell products, it's not a question of—"Will it work?" SUPER LANOLIN Formula 9 must work—or your money back and no questions asked. For free, illustrated booklet, "Better Hair Care", write Charles Antell, 112 South St., Balto. 3, Md.

BETTER FOR YOUNGSTERS!

No chance of breakage. If youngsters drop a can—or a carton of cans—there's no harm done. A real blessing!

Sanitary—used only once and thrown away. No one else has ever drunk from the soft drink can you buy.

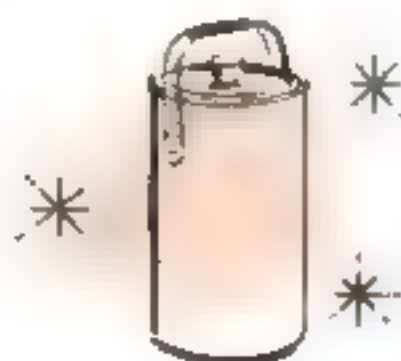

Simple to open. Children can do it themselves. Quick pressure on opener makes smooth V-shape opening.

EASIER FOR YOU!

No deposits, no returns. You can forget forever the nuisance of storing "empties" and lugging them back for refunds.

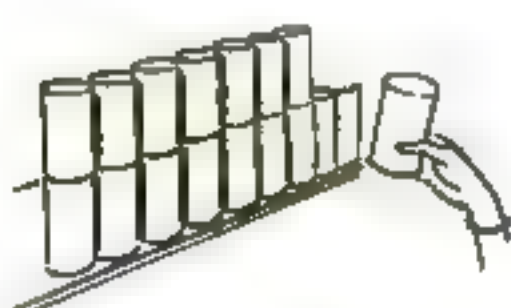

Cool faster. Cans chill more quickly than bottles in your refrigerator—or in the cooler you take on picnics.

Lighter to carry. Cans hold the same amount as bottles—but weigh much less, are easier to carry home from the store.

AND LOOK AT THESE SPECIAL "SMOOTH-TOP" ADVANTAGES!

No bottle—no other type of can—gives you all the important extra advantages you get when you buy soft drinks in the new "Smooth-Top" Cans developed by the American Can Company.

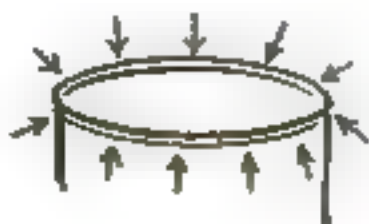

Easy to stack in cupboard or refrigerator. Save space. Pile 'em up two or three on top of each other. It's no problem with the "Smooth-Top."

Specially lined to protect flavor. New "Smooth-Top" Cans have a hard enamel lining which safeguards the flavor of soft drinks—keeps them pure and fresh-tasting.

Easy to drink or pour from. The V-shape opening lets air in as liquid comes out. So simple for children. No gurgling or gulping. Drinking from a "Smooth-Top" Can is the nearest thing to drinking from a glass.

Completely sealed to protect carbonation. "Smooth-Top" Cans are tight-sealed all around—keep the fizz sealed inside until you open them. Another reason why soft drinks taste so good in "Smooth-Top" Cans.

ROUNDUP IN THE ARCTIC

Vermonters hopes to tame the musk ox

Photographed for LIFE by FRITZ GORO

Across the barren arctic tundra roams a strange and vanishing animal, the musk ox, whose curving horns and long hair make it look like a cross between a cow and a buffalo. In a land of little vegetation it survives, nibbling willow leaves in the summer, nuzzling through the snow for lichen during the winter. Hunted almost to extinction, the remaining herds are now rigidly protected.

For years Arctic Expert John J. Teal Jr. has pondered the possibility of domesticating the musk ox, believing it would thrive on the cold slopes of northern New England, where spaciness and cold make cattle-raising difficult. The musk oxen's tender flesh and long hair, he thought, might prove commercially valuable. In 1955 he headed an expedition into northern Canada, hoping to catch a few musk oxen he could tame and breed on his Vermont farm. After a month of chasing and hunting them singly, like the big bull below, he returned to his base for a month across the wild arctic landscape.

DRIVEN INTO THE SHALLOW WATER NEAR SHORE BY THE MANEUVERING CANOE, A 700-POUND MUSK OX BULL ANGRILY CHARGES AFTER HIS WOULD-BE CAPTOR HERBERT DRURY.

BRAVE BULL GIVES THE MEN A BANG-UP BATTLE

The eight-man expedition set out for the northwest territory on Aug. 4, after securing approval of the roundup from the Canadian government, which carefully protects the herds. Flying by seaplane, they made camp on the lake-studded tundra 400 miles northeast of Yellowknife. Methodically laying his plans, Teal constructed a corral with a funnel-shaped opening on a peninsula protruding into a lake. After herding the musk oxen onto the tongue of land, he planned to drive them down the blind alley to the corral. Soon the party spotted a big bull and forced him slowly toward the enclosure. But once inside, the bull plowed through the fence, and took off across the lake. Giving chase in a canoe, Teal and his men finally captured him. But the battle he put up convinced Teal that full-grown musk oxen could not be carried from the tundra in a light plane. He therefore turned his attention to capturing a calf (pp. 130, 131).

TURNING ON THE CANOE WHICH BLOCKS THE WAY TO FREEDOM, THE ENRAGED BULL

A HERD ESCAPES, A CALF IS CAPTURED

For a week Teal and his men had been observing a herd they had spotted from the air, and had followed them doggedly but found no way of cornering them on the open land. Then the herd stopped to graze near a peninsula and the men, spread out in a line, cornered it there. Believing that the herd would cling to the land to protect its calves rather than risk them in the water, Teal hoped to lasso a calf and draw it out. But as the men approached, the canny leader (top, center) wheeled, unexpectedly led the band across the lake and to the safety of high ground beyond (above).

Nearly two discouraging weeks followed as the men fruitlessly sought more animals. Then Teal took off in the plane to look for the oxen and found that by flying low the plane disturbed them and could drive them at will. As time ran out, Pilot Harry Taylor skillfully drove a herd to a peninsula where it plunged into the deep water. Teal and Lansing Holden, waiting with a canoe, quickly set out in pursuit (right), brought their first prize ashore. In the next days two more calves were caught, and in the last moments an expedition which had had three weeks of failure finally knew success.

BEST CHANCE came later when a smaller herd was successfully driven into deep water, pursued by CALF'S FIRST MEAL, a bottle of milk, has to be forcibly administered in the camp corral by Veterinarian Ernest Paquette as Teal holds the animal.

P.S. CALVES ARE DOING FINE AND TAKING NOURISHMENT

The three calves, two females and a male, were flown to Teal's farm near Huntington Center, Vt., where Teal, an anthropologist who has spent years in arctic research, began the job of domesticating them. How the differences in Vermont climate and vegetation will affect the calves is unknown. Undoubtedly they will be subjected to new diseases and their resistance may prove low. Most important remains the question of whether they can be bred in captivity. Teal plans to return to the tundra next year to augment his herd. It will be a couple of decades before he knows for sure whether the musk ox can be domesticated, but he is only 33 and expects to live long enough to find out.

AT NEW VERMONT HOME the three captured calves begin to show signs of tameness, wait for Teal and line up willingly for their milk at feeding time.

96-year test proves your rugged Royal Portable will last a lifetime

For 2000 hours last fall in Hoboken, N. J., type-writer history was re-written by a stock model Royal Portable.

There in the laboratory of the U.S. Testing Company, a mechanical typer ran this Royal 24 hours a day at 100 words per minute.

To equal this amount of typing, you would have to type a 400-word letter every day, except Sunday, for 96 years.

While nobody wants to live that long, the 96-year test* certainly proves that you're not buying a toy, when you get a Royal Portable.

GET BETTER GRADES

The fastest any human being can write in long-hand is about 30 words per minute. In weeks, you'll be typing on your Royal Portable at 50 words per minute.

Besides saving a lot of time, you will be turning out themes and papers that are better spelled, better thought out, better punctuated, because when you see what you're writing in clear type you just can't close your eyes to mistakes, big or small.

All this means just one thing—a big thing: better grades. That's something everybody needs these days, because colleges are getting tough. More people apply than they have room for. Naturally, they take the cream of the crop.

EARN EXTRA MONEY

Then, there's the chance to earn extra money with your Royal Portable.

If you baby-sit, why not type other people's themes at 15¢ to 20¢ per page, instead of looking at television?

How about a sign on the high school bulletin board announcing that you have a typing service?

Why not get your lunch free in the school cafeteria by typing menus? Others have earned money these ways and so can you.

THE PAY-OFF OF FIVE YEARS' PLANNING AND TRAINING COMES AS THE LARGEST CROWD IN BASEBALL HISTORY, 86,563 PEOPLE, FILLS CLEVELAND'S STADIUM ON SEPT. 12 AS INDIANS

HOW WE GOT INTO THE SERIES

GENERAL MANAGER GREENBERG INTENTLY WATCHES THE BIG TRIUMPH AND BIG CROWD

DURING the past three weeks, while the Cleveland Indians successfully maintained their lead in the American League and finally knocked the Yankees out of the race, people kept asking, "What happened to the Yankees?" The answer is: "Nothing."

The Yankees played a stronger game in 1954 than at any time during their record-breaking string of five straight years as world champions. By early September they had rolled up a won-and-lost percentage of .690. This is quite a percentage: .690 would have won 47 of the past 53 American League championships.

A better question would be: "What happened to the Indians?" The answer is: "Everything." Here are some of our major casualties: Mickey Grasso, alternate catcher—broken ankle; he got into his first game Sept. 2. Harry Simpson, first-string outfielder—broken arm; he was optioned to Indianapolis. Bob Lemon, first-string pitcher—crippling back ailment for a month. Mike Garcia, first-string pitcher—broken blood vessel in throwing hand, causing him to miss several times. Bobby Avila, regular second baseman—fractured thumb; he was out three weeks. Al Rosen, first-string everything—fractured knuckle of the right index finger and two strained wrists; he was out three weeks. George Strickland, first-string shortstop—jaw broken in two places; he was out six weeks. Of course there were also the usual pulled muscles, lacerations, contusions, etc.

But all season the Indians have been playing .700 baseball. And yet all season the fans have talked mainly of why we couldn't "pull away" from a Yankee team playing .690 baseball. Few people realized that we were struggling to give Cleveland more than merely another American League pennant. We wanted to win a championship, yes. But we had done that in 1948 with strictly a one-year team. We wanted to build a solid Cleveland club that would break up the Yankee domination of the league. And beating the New York Yankees is like fighting an octopus. You can't cut off a single arm and consider the job done.

What we have been aiming for seems now to be accomplished. The Indians' boss tells how he started at farm club level in 1949 to win the 1954 pennant and to build for future championships

by HANK GREENBERG

Yankees have been caught and stopped. More important, the team that did it figures to be stronger than ever next year. Maybe the next voice you hear will be saying, "Break up those Indians!"

To appreciate what we have done you must first understand baseball as something more than a nine-inning spectacle in the ball park or on your TV screen. Today each big league team is a bustling, corporate operation with several million dollars of investment at stake. The heart of each club is the front office, and the key to the team's continued success lies in how well the front office keeps promising players moving up from the minor leagues. Cleveland has not only a 1954 pennant but the promise of many pennants to come because our system of spotting, training and advancing new young players is now, I think, the best in the American League. Behind this achievement lie five years of hard work on our part and about 40 years of baseball history.

Forty years ago the front office consisted of a frock-coated club president, a bedraggled secretarial assistant and a scout who usually got the job as a friend of the manager. There was no farm system in which minor league clubs were owned by or had working arrangements with big league teams to whom they openly fed their best players. The scout would take off on somewhat hit-or-miss travels through the minors. When he saw a good-looking rookie he tied him up through what was then and still is known as the "reserve clause," a contract whereby the player agreed to reserve his services for that big league team. By a directive from the National Commission, organized farming was prohibited.

Two evils resulted: the rosters of wealthy clubs were overloaded; and players were illegally "concealed" by major league teams on minor league clubs by "gentleman's agreement." The Brooklyn club of 1910 had 61 players and the Phillies only 31. Cleveland and Chicago had 60 each. Washington only 29. The rich got richer, the poor poorer.

Things went on more or less this way until after World War I. Then a returning war veteran named Branch Rickey saw an opportunity and took it. He got 2,000 civic-minded stockholders to back him in reorganizing the faltering St. Louis Cardinals, which at the time had 23 players and a $175,000 debt. Rickey's first move was to take advantage of the fact that the directive against farming had been suspended. He bought big stock interests in three minor league clubs.

This was the farm club idea, born of desperation at a time when fewer than 10 minor leagues operated. The 1954 season opened with 36 minor leagues made up of 269 teams. At the top are the Open Classification Pacific Coast League and the two Triple A leagues, the latter each made up of eight teams from cities whose combined population exceeds three million. They range down to 11 C and 10 D leagues, representing league-wide populations of 150,000. Two thirds, or 178, of the minor league clubs were either owned outright or had full working agreements with big league clubs.

During the first five years of its operation, while John McGraw and the Giants were at the top, Rickey also devised a new and revolutionary approach to baseball administration. Through large-scale organized scouting, trial and plenty of error, he developed fast, eager young ball players on 10 teams with a B classification or higher, plus many more in smaller leagues. In 1926 Rickey's once impoverished Cardinals won their first National League pennant and defeated the Ruth-Gehrig Yankees in a World Series that set financial records.

Henry Benjamin ("Hank") Greenberg has spent 22 years in professional baseball as player and executive. With a lifetime batting average of .313 and 331 home runs, he was best known until 1949 as one of the great power hitters of all time and as the son-in-law of New York department store owner Bernard Gimbel. In 1949 he became general manager of the Cleveland Indians. This article on his handling of that job was written with Sportswriter Arthur Mann.

The baseball front office, particularly in St. Louis, became a beehive of specialized administration. The progress of some 600 players under contract in all classifications was charted through telephone, telegraph, daily box scores, managers' game reports and weekly league averages. Rival players were constantly evaluated, and when a player shifted clubs, seven duplicate records of the move were made.

By 1931 the Rickey system of minor league affiliates, through ownership or elaborate working agreement, was so successful that it led Jacob Ruppert, millionaire owner of the Yankees, to take the plunge too. Against the advice of his general manager, his team manager and his chief scout he bought the Newark ball club in the International League to begin the Yankees' farm system. Its success was immediate. The Yankees won the 1932 pennant and then beat the Chicago Cubs four straight in the World Series. Five years later, as the Yankees were winning the second of four straight American League pennants, their AAA farm club, Newark, was running away from seven other clubs with the strongest minor league team ever assembled. They won by a margin of 25½ games and every player on the club went to the major leagues.

No one could question the wisdom of farm system baseball after that. Newark's opponent in the Little World Series of 1937 was Branch Rickey's top farm club, Columbus. Some of the names on the two teams have a familiar ring today—Enos Slaughter, Max Lanier and Mort Cooper for Columbus; Joe Gordon, Charlie Keller, Atley Donald and Buddy Rosar for Newark. Within another five years they were all rivals in the first of two straight Yankee-Cardinal World Series.

As a high school ball player in the Bronx, I turned down a chance to be a part of the Yankee farm system. I was a slugging first baseman and the Yankees had the greatest in Lou Gehrig. So I chose Detroit. After a couple of apprentice years in the minor leagues, I got my chance as a regular on the Tigers. We beat the Yankees in my second year, 1934, and again in the third and twice after that, in 1940 and 1945. But they never stayed beaten.

In 1947 I was playing for Pittsburgh. Despite the most cordial relations, I was considering getting out of baseball entirely and I insisted on an unconditional release at the end of that season. In such a case all other big league teams must sign a waiver, "For purposes of unconditional release, claiming fee $1.00." All waived except Cleveland, where Bill Veeck headed a syndicate that had just bought the Indians. He paid the dollar and claimed my contract.

I asked him why he had done it. I certainly was not worth the big salary he would have to pay. Behind me were 12 years of hard play in the big leagues, interrupted by four years of military service. But I now lacked more than the old timing and reflexes. The vital desire to play wasn't there. I might have hung on, adding an occasional home run to my lifetime total of 331, feasting on the cheers, trying not to hear the jeers when I failed. All Veeck would say was, "You can help me out at Cleveland." So I asked him for a job in the front office. He gave me $15,000 a year and told me to study the farm teams.

Cleveland then owned seven teams and had working agreements with nine. I spent 1948 traveling around the country watching Cleveland farm clubs in everything from large parks to Class D ballparks. I soon learned that though we had fairly good teams and enough of them we didn't have an organization. The teams were

LEAF-EATING POWER MOWER

Its whirling blade mows grass, cuts weeds, trims edges, mulches turf—and pulverizes 30 bushels of leaves a minute

A new kind of power mower with a special appetite for leaves threatens to replace the time-honored mower that only cuts grass. It's called the Toro Whirlwind 18.

You roll it over your lawn like any other mower. Under the completely enclosed housing, a spinning blade sucks up the leaves, chews them to bits in seconds. Your lawn is left healthy and happy under a practically invisible layer of turf-building mulch. It's as quick and easy as vacuuming your rugs.

Yet the Whirlwind 18 does more than gobble up leaves. It gives your grass a bristling "heinie" cut, slashes down even the thickest weeds, trims whisker-close to fences, walls, buildings. It's a jack-of-all-lawn jobs that sells for $89.95*.

Only authorized Toro dealers offer the Whirlwind 18—already the most imitated power mower in the world. You can find your Toro dealer, and your authorized Toro parts-and-service depot, in the classified section of the phone book.

isolated units, each trying to win recognition and promotion to a higher classification, which meant more pay. They trained in widely separated camps—Florida, Texas, Virginia, California. Managers did not see their new players until they arrived at training camp each year. Each manager had to succeed or fail with what he was sent by the front office. If he needed help after the season opened, a substitute was occasionally transferred to meet the emergency. But close touch between headquarters and the farm clubs was completely lacking. Managers of "working agreement" clubs thought that the "ownership clubs" were getting the better prospects. Each scout wanted his own find given a better opportunity on the parent team. The futures of managers and scouts were as uncertain as those of the players. During many a winter baseball meeting you could see haunted-looking managers and scouts in the hotel lobbies hunting for new jobs.

I thought that the only answer to all this confusion and uncertainty would be a central training camp. Managers and scouts could assemble young players there, mingle with all of them and get to know them. The emphasis would be on the entire farm organization rather than on any individual club. This was not a new idea but it was my conclusion after all my travels.

I talked it over with Bill Veeck. He told me to go ahead. So I rented a beat-up old air base at Marianna, Fla. Here we built four baseball diamonds back to back. Raised platforms in the middle gave us a view of all four diamonds. We stripped team names from the uniforms of the 375 players. Our one concession to league classification was in the color of the stockings. For ready detection in files, minor league baseball uses different-colored contracts. Class D is brown, C is pink, B is blue, A is green, AA and AAA are white. We bought stockings of these colors and used them accordingly. Thus we could spot a hustling boy with brown stockings (D) playing Class B baseball and, conversely, a boy with green stockings (A) soldiering or tapering off to Class D performance.

I assembled the 17 minor league managers and 10 scouts and told them, "We're here to find players to star for the Cleveland Indians as soon as possible. Don't be worried now about your own rosters. You'll get a good team. We want a well-balanced, hustling organization. Your jobs for next year and the year after don't depend on whether you win or lose pennants. Of course we want championships and play-offs. But we also want our players studied and taught in uniform fashion. We're in this for one reason, to make Cleveland the best baseball club in the country, not for one year but forever."

The player became a human being

WE worked on the fields immediately after breakfast until lunch, and then again until 4 p.m. Right after dinner the entire staff of managers and scouts gathered in a meeting room before blackboards. There we consulted our notes and discussed all the players we had seen. By keeping daily tabs on all players we were able to swap information about them and assign them to teams without fear of later protests from managers. Transferring a player from a club after the season starts is the best way to reduce the morale of the team and the support of the fans. The central camp reduced this hazard to a minimum. Players could be transferred to meet an emergency. But even then the manager getting the new player would have seen him in training and would know his good and bad points. The player was no longer a set of statistics; he was a human being.

(So smooth you can't even tell when they shift!)

Designed to get the best out of your engine, B-W Automatic Transmissions assure maximum power and acceleration with real gas economy. So smooth you can hardly notice when there's a shift from one speed range to the next. Made for both cars and trucks.

THE FASTEST-GROWING AUTOMATIC TRANSMISSIONS IN THE FIELD TODAY

Quick-acting, sure and quiet! But B-W Automatic Transmissions do no pussy-footing when it comes to delivering the power.

Instantly, at your command, they make power flow in a single uninterrupted stream. Shifting through the various speed ranges takes place so quietly the human ear can't detect it. There's no clicking or commotion.

B-W's ingenious way of combining gears and a torque converter (which multiplies power with whirling oil) achieves both remarkable smoothness and "get up and go." In these transmissions, 92% of the work of driving is done for you—easy on you, easy on the gas. Unlike most others, B-W automatic drives are air cooled—they never heat your feet.

On hills you'll find sure solid braking by the engine. And rocking out of mud or snow is easier than with standard drives.

Be sure your next car has a B-W Automatic Transmission... the result of 22 years' research by Borg-Warner, whose aim is always to "design it better—make it better!" You start by pouring light, sparkling salad oil—Wesson Oil. No lost motion digging out and melting solid shortening. Thrifty, too—pour just what you need and never waste a drop.

Wesson Oil gives you an extra margin of safety for light, digestible frying—because Wesson heats hotter without smoking than costliest solid shortenings. (Remember, when fat smokes and burns it is breaking down—harming your fried foods.) Wesson fries so safely—you can enjoy two fried foods at the same meal!

You'll taste the difference, too, when you fry with this pure vegetable salad oil. There's a fresh delicacy in Wesson—a special lightness you'll find in no other kind of shortening.

Cut potatoes into strips $\frac{3}{8}$ -inch wide and $\frac{1}{8}$ -inch thick. Pat dry with paper toweling. Fry until light brown in deep Wesson Oil heated to 385° F. (For extra crispness, potatoes may be soaked in cold water one hour before frying.) Wesson Fries are sure to be light and digestible.

SKILLET BURGER BALLS

Burger Balls:

- 1½ pounds ground beef
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- 1 slightly beaten egg
- ½ cup dry bread crumbs

Sauce:

- ¼ cup Wesson Oil
- 1 cup chopped onion
- ½ cup chopped green pepper
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 2 8-oz. cans tomato sauce (2 cups)
- 1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon celery seed
- Dash of pepper

Combine ground beef, 1½ teaspoons salt, egg and crumbs. Shape into balls 1½ inches in diameter. Brown in skillet in hot Wesson Oil, remove from skillet. In same skillet, cook onion and green pepper several minutes. Add rest of ingredients, heat to boiling. Add meat balls; cover, and simmer 30 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

We did have disappointments. Twelve boys quit camp in the first three days. They said it wasn't baseball. But plenty of them stayed on, and they were coached by such experts as Charley ("Red") Ruffing and Kerby Farrell. We had about 75 free agents, boys who had never played in organized baseball and who had been spotted by our scouts. More than 30 of them were signed to contracts.

We assigned players to 16 farm clubs for 1949. Five months later 13 of these teams made the play-offs in their leagues. It was the highest percentage of any farm system that season, including that of the Brooklyn Dodgers, who had sent out nearly twice as many players from their central camp at Vero Beach.

That year the Yankees won the pennant. We finished third, having lost 12 of 22 games to the Yankees. This pennant race at the top momentarily overshadowed the hopeful developments below. But a comparison of our farm club operation with the Yankees' showed that all but one of our top nine teams finished in the first division: fourth or better. Not one of the Yankees' nine most important clubs finished higher than fifth.

That winter I was promoted to general manager on a three-year contract. One of my first moves as general manager was to transfer the operations of our Marianna camp to a bigger base at Daytona Beach. There we departmentalized our farm club operations and expanded the whole program. The results in five years are shown simply and graphically in this comparison between the Indian and Yankee farm teams for 1954:

INDIANS			YANKEES
CLASS	TEAM	FIN.	TEAM	FIN.
AAA	Indianapolis, Ind.	1	Kansas City, Mo.	7
AA	(No team)		Birmingham, Ala.	3
A	Reading, Pa.	4	Binghamton, N.Y.	5
B	Keokuk, Iowa	2	Quincy, Ill.	3
B	Spartanburg, S.C.	4	Norfolk, Va.	1
C	Fargo, N.Dak.	1	St. Joseph, Mo.	3
C	Sherbrooke, Que.	2	McAlester, Okla.	3
D	Jacksonville Beach, Fla.	1	Owensboro, Ky.	3
	(Second half)	3	(Second half)	2
D	Tifton, Ga.	7	Bristol, Tenn.	3

Perhaps we have not exactly crushed the head of the Yankee octopus and cut off all tentacles. But we are getting close to it. This year we hurt them at their strongest source of player supply for Yankee Stadium: the American Association Class AAA League. Our Indianapolis Indians, led by Kerby Farrell, ran away with the Association pennant.

They piled up a 16-game lead by early August and coasted in ahead of Louisville, top farm club of the Boston Red Sox. Promoted last year from Class A Reading, Farrell developed some spectacular infield and outfield prospects, especially first baseman Joe Altobelli. Farrell's big surprise was the 21-year-old southpaw, Herbert Score, who struck out 330 batters in winning 22 games. Only Bob Feller and Rube Waddell fanned more batters in a single season. Score was voted the league's Rookie of the Year and Most Valuable Player.

The Indianapolis team has other valuable assets. Hank Foiles, a catcher, led the team in hitting with .332. Bill Harrell hit .307 as a third baseman. The colorful Rocky Colavito from the Bronx, N.Y. batted in 74 runs in his first 73 games, slumped badly but wound up with a new Indianapolis home run record. Harry Simpson, handicapped early by his broken arm, hit .361 for the closing weeks of the season.

The Yankees' team in the same league, the Kansas City Blues, finished second in 1953 and produced the batting champion, Vic Power. However, much of its rookie strength, including Power, was used in big league trades last winter in the Yankees' attempt to win their sixth straight pennant. As a result the Blues finished next to last this year.

The battle with the Yankees at the next level, Class A, was between our Reading team and their Binghamton club. Our team made the playoffs and Binghamton didn't. The next lowest classification in which both Cleveland and the Yankees have teams is B, the Three-I League. And we beat them there.

We had a disappointment or two but nothing to offset the splendid records of Spartanburg in the Tri-State League, Fargo in the Northern and Sherbrooke in the Provincial.

The minor league managers and the scouts who locate the talent are the real heroes of the Indian organization's victory over the Yankees. Such men as Jimmy Bloodworth, Jo-Jo White, Merrill May and Spud Chandler are far from the limelight they knew as big league stars, but they are the backbone of our big league success. There isn't a harder job in baseball than hanging around the country in buses from one small city hotel to the next, and unless a man believes in what he's doing and the people he's doing it for, he can go to pieces. I remember once being awakened by a midnight phone call from a frightened young business manager many miles away. He was worried about his team manager, a former big league star and a friend of mine, who had been bearing a lot of hard work and frustrations. I rushed out to find that my friend had got into the habit of hurrying from the ball park to his hotel room where, behind locked doors, he would pace the floor and talk to himself. He was near complete collapse.

Inability to subordinate the "major league mind" to minor league organizational methods frays the nerves and knocks the props from under otherwise strong men. They become plagued by injured pride, fear and a feeling of insecurity. Of course I had to replace my friend without explanation, and of course I was criticized severely for treating a former star so shabbily.

But we get lots of cheerful news too. Just as thrilling as the performances of Bob Lemon and Bob Feller in Cleveland's Municipal Stadium was a piece of news about a 19-year-old Negro pitcher at Fargo, N.Dak., a Class C pennant-winning club up near the Canadian border.

all. It is a most uncertain trail. We don't know which of our many good minor league rookies (including 150 or more now in military service) will make the parent team.

But some will come through and when they do, they'll not make life easier for the Yankees. We know this because, by and large, our teams were close to the best in their class during the past

"GRANT VOTED ROOKIE OF THE YEAR," Phil Seghi, the Fargo-Moorhead manager wired us not long ago. He referred to Jim ("Mudcat") Grant, a big right-hander whose 217 innings of work, 174 strike-outs and 21-5 record put Fargo into the lead by late August. We later learned that Grant had won by the widest margin in the history of the award.

We can't promise the Cleveland fans that Jim will reach the big leagues ahead of, for instance, Guy Grasso, the Yankees' pitching star on their Norfolk, Va. team that won the pennant in the Class B Piedmont League. We can't guarantee Jim will reach the Indians at season. All of them, when they had the chance, from the major league down through Class D, beat the Yankees.

This is not meant to be crowing. Don't think that Cleveland, and particularly Hank Greenberg, has lost respect for the Yankees. I have the highest regard for Yankee teams and administration. And there is no feud. There is, however, competition of the strongest kind, such as Ford gives General Motors or, if I may say so, Gimbel's gives Macy's.

I don't want anyone to think that our long buildup to championship stature was all a smooth operation. Our first big crisis came in 1950 with Manager Lou Boudreau. Separating a great ball player from the scene of his greatness always produces a hullabaloo. Management is drawn and quartered in print. Fans threaten boycott. I was attacked for "firing" Boudreau. He was never fired. He was released so that he could take advantage of another job opportunity. To my mind, Boudreau was not the ideal manager for a big league organization operating under the new methods.

EX-MANAGER Boudreau ran Indians from 1942 to 1950.

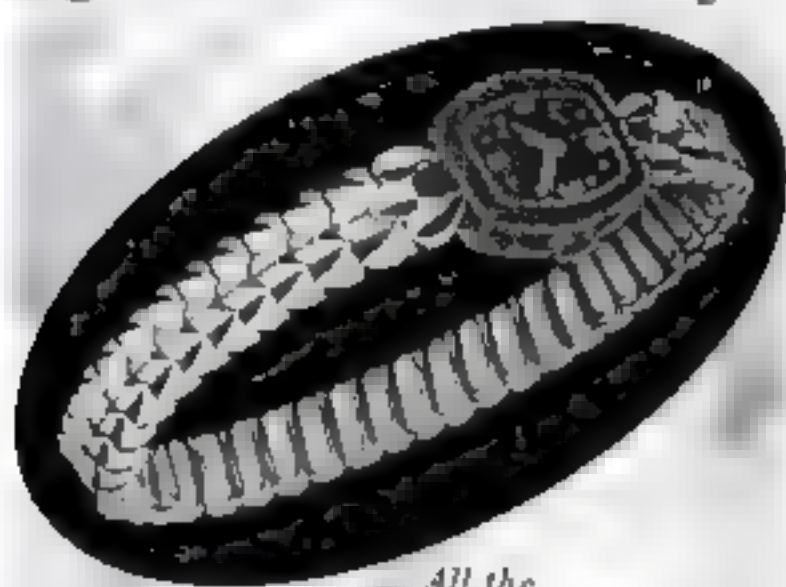

Each new player delivered in the spring to a big league manager under this farm system method represents upward of $100,000 of corporate spending for bonus and salary, scouting, study, optioning, supervision, transportation, teaching and even medical bills. A New York Yankee official, testifying before the Celler congressional committee a few years ago, put the figure twice as high. He said that minor league operating costs are measured against player production, and that each rookie who reaches the Yankees represents $200,000.

Regardless of the exact amount, most of it is spent before the manager sees the boy under big league pressure. Extension of front office operation, then, comes as the manager tests the new player under big league conditions. A single look, a few innings of competition in a game already lost will not suffice. He represents a small fortune. Was it wasted or not?

If a big league manager's pride and ego thrive upon his unique ability to detect talent or lack of it when others can't, he'll never get along with the front office. If he measures his success in terms of popularity or length of interviews on how much he has developed this or that youngster overnight, the front office won't get along with him. Decisions based on whim or caprice are useless. As a corporate employee, the manager must return a fair and concrete appraisal of the rookie's value.

The front office wants to know if it is wrong. It can be and its mistakes mean money lost. It assumes responsibility for success or failure where playing talent is concerned. Today's big league manager is no longer part of a popularity contest. He cannot win ball games by force of personality, his own lifetime batting average or friendship. He must get results from players handed over to him or give a valid reason for their failure. He is in no way responsible for their discovery or development. When the season gets under way, he simply chooses 25 from the total pre-season roster of 40.

Today's big league manager sits in on staff meetings with the front office. His opinions and strategies are respected. He can debate, defend his position and get angry. The front office will and does give in if his demands are fair and convincingly argued.

With Boudreau gone, I turned to Al Lopez. I had watched him manage Indianapolis in 1950 and he was one of the best I'd ever seen. Lopez is a quiet man by baseball standards. In running a team he uses his tongue less than his head and eyes, which are black and sharp and not afraid to look at you. He has strong convictions and isn't afraid to defend them. He's big enough to listen to others. He had a remarkable record as an all-time catcher, playing in 1,918 games, more than any other big leaguer. (I might add that in going after a foul no catcher could throw a mask farther.)

As a manager, first at Indianapolis and then Cleveland, he has never brought a team home lower than second. He wins games without boasting, loses without alibis. He has the respect of his players, coaches and his front office.

Most important, Lopez understands and believes in the necessity of having the best possible farm system. He watches the performance of the farm club players almost as carefully as he does his own. He knows the main reason why he is winning the pennant and beating the Yankees this year: because he has winning farm teams behind him. He has an impressive roster of young players to remind him of it—on the Indians he has seven players who have come from the Indian farm system in the past two years.

Outstanding among these is, for instance, Al Smith, himself from Indianapolis, who took over left field this year and put a Cleveland fixture, Dale Mitchell, on the bench. It will be hard to match his clutch homers in Yankee Stadium.

Some of those tough fly balls he has pulled down, plus his speed as a base runner, have made the decisive difference in some of the games we have taken by one run. Another man from Indianapolis, Dave Pope, knocked out a pinch-hit homer when we were behind the A's 4-1 on Sept. 9 and set the team afire. If Bill Glynn's left-handed hitting improves, two Altobellis won't be able to get him off first base because Bill simply knows all the plays. Catching? Two years in the Marines have made Hal Naragon hungry for steady work. As a left-handed pinch hitter he won five games at the plate—the last being that Sept. 9 game with the A's when he walked with the bases full and thus "batted in" the winning run.

As for young pitchers, Dave Hoskins, with only a few starts, couldn't get a chance to improve on his promising work of 1953. Don Mossi's left-handed relief pitching was the talk of the league, as was Ray Narleski's right arm. These three, with Mike Garcia, had the lowest earned-run average on the staff, but they couldn't get regular chances.

New spirit in the oldtimers

OF course these youngsters aren't winning games for the Indians all by themselves. None of them is a star. As a matter of fact it was planned that way. The farm club boys are taught to play well-rounded baseball, to excel at the difficult art of playing well on any club and to concentrate on being a steady, dependable player rather than a flashy star.

These kids from the farm system have formed a solid base for the more spectacular playing of the older stand-bys like Larry Doby and Al Rosen. But more than that, they have given the Indians a spirit like that of no other club in the league. All the fans have marveled at how some of our veterans have played better ball than at any time in the past decade. They have done so largely because of the spirit of those youngsters from the farm system, whose competition for regular berths creates a pressure from below. Hal Newhouser, for example, was having so much trouble with his arm last year that it looked as if he were through with big league baseball. This year he has had under 3.00 earned runs per game. There are six others with his record on this year's Indian team. The farm club players have a lot to do with that.

Remember that we weren't exactly in the cellar last year; we were second, right behind the Yankees. We had a good ball club then, but it was this year when the dividends from the farm system really started coming in and they put us over the top.

Thanks to our farm system too the Indians have a lot of reserve strength, which helps keep the pressure on the opposition.

That accounts for many of the games that were won in late innings by a single run. People call it luck. Ballplayers call it pressure. Hold the opposition until they make errors, or throw the wrong pitch. Pennants are won by taking more than half of the one-run games. Our reserves came up with the great play, or pitch, or clutch hit in game after game.

Our first-base problem had long been the butt of jokes. We now have the last laugh in Vic Wertz, a hard-hitting outfielder whom we obtained from Baltimore in trade for a young pitcher. Wertz showed great courage and team spirit by tackling a strange infield position so we could benefit by his batting power. He blew several big chances and even a couple of games. The law of averages said he had to. But he stuck to the job and gave us the power we needed.

Sam Dente, a veteran shortstop promoted from Indianapolis, did all the things our star, George Strickland, did before suffering the broken jaw. Hank Majeski will soon be 38 years old but his play and spirit belied his age on the field and on the bench.

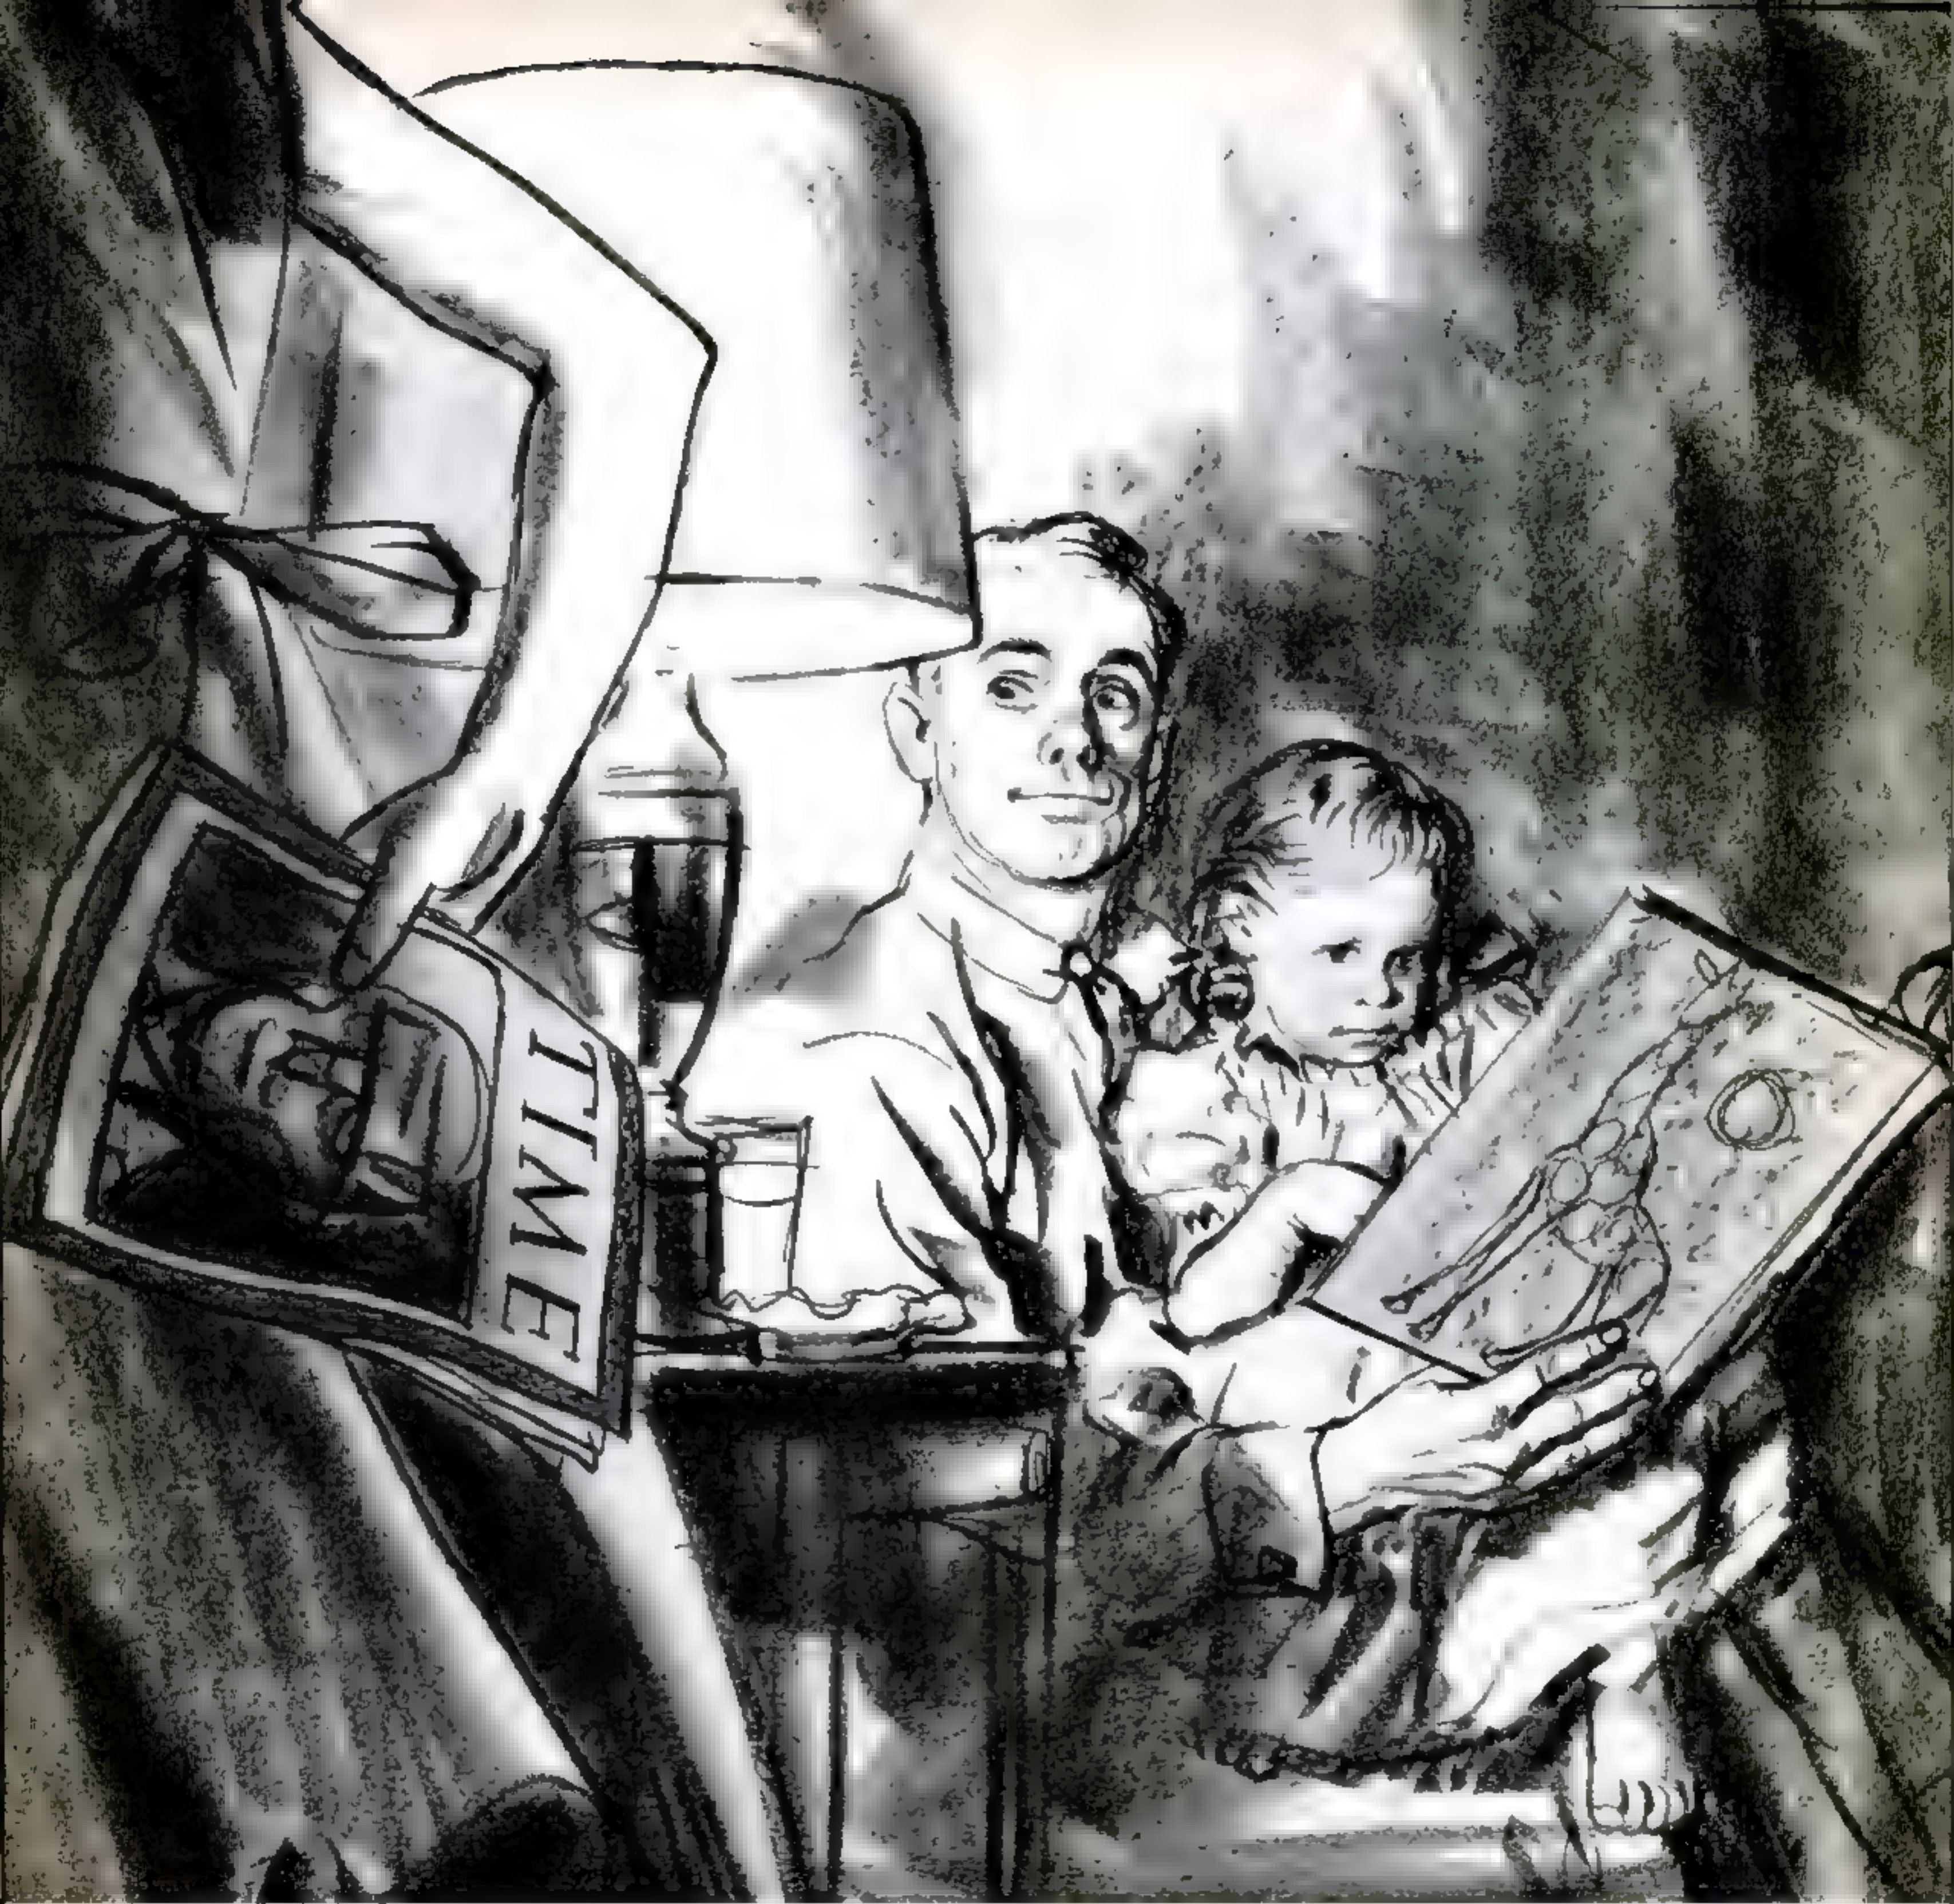

You can't say enough about the Cleveland pitching staff and their coach, Mel Harder, and the other tireless coaches, Red Kress, Tony Cuccinello and Bill Lobe. Harder's is one of the finest staffs to enter a World Series. More than one supposedly "washed up" pitcher has made a comeback under their guidance. For years Bob Feller depended on the best fast ball I ever saw or failed to see. It required several years and defeats to make him realize that he was no longer fast enough to get the ball by the batter in a pinch. Now he has stopped depending on the fast ball in the clutch and went to breaking pitches and changes of speed. He had a fine season.

Such veterans undoubtedly made the most spectacular contributions to this year's pennant. But the youngsters up from the minors were right behind them, both in spirit and ability. So I'm going to be hard put in deciding how or whether to give a chance to some of those outstanding farm players of ours, such as the boys at Indianapolis. With Bob Lemon, Early Wynn, Art Houtteman, Mike Garcia, Feller and Newhouser performing as they are, how can even Herb Score hope to elbow his way into a Cleveland berth?

I'm sure I don't know but it's certainly going to be fun watching them try, especially from where we're sitting right now.

PROMISING FARM CLUB PRODUCTS now on Indians are catcher Naragon; pitchers Narleski, Mossi, Hoskins, third baseman Regalado, outfielder Pope.

How I feel about LIFE

LIFE CHANGED MY LIFE

May 11, 1942 is a date I'll always remember. For on that day my picture appeared on the cover of LIFE. And my life hasn't been the same since.

Up until that time I had been studying dramatics at Columbia University and modeling in my spare time. After making the cover of LIFE as a fashion model, I had very little spare time for anything.

George Abbott, the theatrical producer, immediately gave me a part in a new show he was casting, called "Beat The Band." Then Mr. Abbott put me in another show. This time it was "Kiss and Tell," and I played Corliss Archer for fourteen months. From Broadway I went to Hollywood where I've been ever since, in motion pictures and on my own television show "My Favorite Husband."

Judging from the letters people write to the editor, LIFE has changed a great many other people's lives, too. There's a world of human interest in the Letters Column in LIFE, and I think it's my favorite department.

The way LIFE lets its readers talk back, sound off and often disagree so vehemently with the editors, LIFE, 9 Rockefeller Plaza, N.Y.C.

to me is the mark of a fair-minded, great magazine.

And LIFE is a great magazine—all of it—its news coverage and the brightness of its text features, the fun of its parties, and the excitement of seeing in pictures all those people and places you never ordinarily visit. LIFE is informative to read, but fun, too. I guess that's why I like it so much—and read it so regularly.
